JESSUP AND TECH WILL CO-OPERATE

Officers and Men at Camp Will Have Advantage of Course at Georgia Institution, Under Present Plans—Hold Conference Today.

Plans for the co-operation of Georgia Tech and Camp Jessup in establishing one of the most intensive technical training courses offered in the nation's military history for the benefit of officers and enlisted men in the motor transport corps at Camp Jessup are expected to be worked out at a conference Tuesday between Dr. K. G. Matheson, president of Tech; Major General C. B. Drake, chief of the motor transport corps of the United States army; Lieutenant Colonel Dean Halford, commandant at Camp Jessup, and General Drake's staff officers and Major Reuben Miller, Jr., chief engineer of the corps.

The conference is the result of plans formulated some time ago by General Drake, who realizing the necessity for advanced training for members of the motor corps, took steps for ascertaining a suitable place to be designated for the training.

Pleased With Post.

General Drake and his staff reached Atlanta a few days ago, and after an inspection at Camp Jessup Monday the general asserted that he was well pleased with the post, and that from his observation thus far he considered Jessup an ideal location for the training course.

Tentative plans were discussed at other conferences a few weeks ago between President Matheson and Camp Jessup's commandant, Colonel Halford, but the general details will not be decisively worked until the conference today.

Present plans call for the transfer from Jessup to Tech of $10,000 worth of motor equipment training apparatus. The equipment will consist of cut-down motor transports and other mechanical apparatus.

General Drake, in a statement following the inspection Monday, gave full assurance of the government's intention of making Jessup a permanent post.

"The training that would be offered in the proposed technical courses," he said, "would serve the men in good stead in civil life, as well as make them more efficient for the service. This suggestion is heartily approved by leading manufacturers. The object of the course would be to offer practical technical training to men in the army. It would be without cost. We have some big problems, and Tech can help us out immensely."

As outlined by General Drake, plans being considered provide for the practical training of men at the camp, with class work in automotive theoretics at Tech.

It is planned to have 250 officers receive the complete training every year. Some of the officers will be returned overseas men. After some months of the practical shop work at the camp, which will be carried on with the class work, too, the rest of the training will consist entirely of post-graduate class work at Tech.

Plans for the technical training of the members of the transport corps of the army thus far take in only district E, which is composed, besides Jessup, of camps in six southern states.

It is expected that the conference today also will bring out further arrangements whereby the class rooms of Georgia Military academy will be included in the plans for the training.

Colonel Furlow, who is a Tech alumnus, stated that the affiliation of Tech and Jessup in the movement would prove of great benefit to the efficiency of the entire motor corps.

Following the conference Tuesday General Drake will leave for Americus for an inspection of Souther flying field. From there he will go to Columbus to visit Camp Benning. He was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City club Monday and during the afternoon made an official call on the governor at the capitol. He was the guest of General Cameron at luncheon at Camp Gordon Sunday.

Col. Cyrus Strickler, of Atlanta, Praises Work Done "Over There." Many of the Nurses Remain in France for Service There.

17TH ENGINEERS EXPECTED TODAY

Regiment Trained Here Will Go to Camp Merritt Before Coming Home. Plans for Reception in Atlanta Are Practically Complete.

17TH EXPECTED TODAY.

News received from Washington last night indicates that the Seventeenth Regiment of Engineers, which was mobilized and trained in Atlanta, and which did remarkable work in France, will arrive in Hoboken today on the Susquehanna and will go from that point to Camp Merritt for a few days before returning to Atlanta. There are hundreds of Atlanta and Georgia boys in this unit of the service.

Newport News, Va., March 24.—(Special.)—The Emory unit, base hospital 43, composed largely of Atlanta doctors and nurses, returned this morning on the transport Kroonland, after a pleasant twelve-day voyage from France.

The members of the unit have spent about nine months in the midst of the terrible conditions behind the battle lines of France, and while they saw no real battles themselves they caught the backwash of the great fighting and tell many grewsome tales of the things they saw over there.

Warned Against Bombers.

The hospital unit spent all of its time at Blois, France, and while the stream of wounded men was continuous during the last weeks of fighting, the hospital escaped the German atrocities so common over there, although Lieutenant Colonel Cyrus Strickler, of Atlanta, stated that they were warned on numerous occasions of impending danger from the Hun baby-killers, as the bombing ships were called.

Most of the nurses of the unit, many of whom live in Atlanta, have remained "over there" to do more work for the boys who paid a big price for war. Some other members of the unit, it was said, had sailed from France and are expected to land in New York at any time.

The unit is going to Camp Gordon in a few days to be demobilized. Their arrangements can be completed here within a week, it is thought, and they will then be on their way to their last station. Every man is in fine shape, the officers in charge stated, and the manner in which they conducted themselves this morning when they stepped on the pier corroborated these statements.

The chief thought of the whole organization is when they will be discharged, and it is thought they

Automatic Guide Proves Success For Aeroplanes

Under Automatic Control Big Airplane Makes Trip of 100 Miles—No Human Being Aboard—Baker Tells of Invention.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 24.—Under automatic control an airplane capable of carrying a heavy load and without any human being aboard to guide it, has made a trip of more than hundred miles and landed within a very short distance of the point it was sent to reach.

Invention of the automatic guide, which has been kept secret until now, was mentioned by Newton D. Baker, secretary of war, in a speech here today while he and General Peyton C. Marsh, chief of staff of the United States army, were in Fort Worth to inspect Camp Bowie. Secretary Baker referred to the invention to impress on his hearers the possible horrors in future wars if there is to be no league of nations.

The invention was made in America, according to Mr. Baker. In the test, as described by Mr. Baker, an airplane was first sent out under control of a pilot without making a landing, returning to its point of origin after locating the distant objective. Then another airplane was sent out under automatic control set to land at the designated point and it effected the landing so close, said Mr. Baker, that had it been a shell it would have been considered a good shot.

Secretary Baker did not explain the exact nature of the invention, but he made it clear that the war department considers it one of the most wonderful pieces of destructive mechanism ever contrived.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR MISSING GIRL

Little Girl Reports Two Strange Youths Dragged Child of 13 Into Woods. Entire Neighborhood Is Aroused.

A party of police officers and more than a score of persons for several hours last night combed the woods near the L. & N. railway bridge over Lee street with lanterns and flashlights, searching for the whereabouts of a 13-year-old girl who lives on Queen street, who was said to have been dragged into the woods shortly before dark Monday by two 16-year-old boys.

The first news was brought to the mother of the girl by a companion who said that they were on their way home when they were accosted by two strange boys. The little girl, who lives several doors away from the home of the missing child, said that the boys tried to catch her, but she pulled away and ran home.

The mother at once began a search for her little girl, but after dark returned home and told her husband, who is a prominent Atlanta insurance man. According to the police. The mother told them that her daughter had on a valuable diamond ring, and she believed that the boys would try to steal it.

Upon hearing the news of the affair, the father told several of the neighbors, who secured flashlights and lanterns, and followed him to the woods. Later, not meeting with success in the search for his daughter, he returned home and telephoned the police headquarters.

Assistant Chief Jett dispatched Detectives Jameson and Armstrong to the scene and notified a number of patrolmen on duty in the West End section, who hurried to the scene. The entire neighborhood became aroused, and more than a score of persons joined in the search.

City detectives went to the home of one of the boys whose name is known, but his father, a farmer, said that his son left home earlier in the afternoon and had not been seen since. He said he thought that his son had probably gone to town to a movie, as it was not unusual for him to stay out so late. He was told of the occurrence by the officers, and, he said, he did not think his boy would do such a thing, but if he had he wanted him arrested and tried by the courts.

Despite the efforts of the searching party at midnight Monday, no trace had been found of the little girl.

CZAR AND FAMILY KILLED IN BUNCH

Shot in Basement of House in Siberia, Says French General--Women Mistreated in Presence of the Czar.

San Francisco, March 24.—Confirmation of the execution of the former Emperor of Russia and his wife and daughters under particularly revolting conditions by Bolshevik troops was given here today by General Robert C. Paris, one of the first French officers to be assigned to the Czecho-Slovak army in Russia. General Paris is on his way home to make an official report of the occurrence to the French government. He arrived here yesterday from Vladivostok.

Nicholas and his family were shot in the basement of their house at Ekaterinburg, Siberia. The women of the once royal family were subjected to indignities and mistreatment in the presence of the former czar before the executions took place, General Paris said.

The Execution Described.

The house is now the headquarters of General Gaida, a Czeeho-Slovak commander. Describing the scene attending the execution of the Romanoff family, General Paris said:

"Early one morning the czar was taken from an upstairs room and stood against the wall in the basement of the house. There he was shot, after which the czarina was shot and then her daughters and other members of the household.

"A few days following the murder the bodies were taken under cover of night by automobiles into nearby villages, where they were cut into small pieces and burned separately. The charred remains were found by officers of the forces opposed to the Bolsheviki. Pieces of the burned clothing also were found. Proof that the garments were those of the Romanoffs was given by the fact that the diamonds which the czarina and her daughters wore in their waists were picked up.

Murder Room Sealed.

"The room in which the murder was committed is now sealed. The plaster on the walls shows where the rifle bullets penetrated. The bullets were removed with bayonet points. Bloodstains have been washed from the floor. Under the flooring, however, little pools of blood were found. In several places in the death room the blood seeped through the cracks in the floor.

"Every one in Russia is now thoroughly convinced the entire Romanoff household was wiped out by the Bolsheviists. The official reports sent to France were conclusive.

"The czar and his family are dead. That is positive."

Cotton Growers Given Scoring By Gov. Allen

Kansas Executive Says Southern Producers Are "Trading Upon Misery of World" in Effort to Cut Acreage and Maintain High Prices.

Topeka, Kan., March 24.—The cotton growers of the south, in their effort to limit the acreage of cotton to maintain high prices, are "trading upon the misery of the world," Governor Henry J. Allen charged today in a letter refusing an invitation from the South Carolina Cotton Growers' association to attend a conference at which representatives of the campaign to reduce cotton acreage will be received. The letter was addressed to J. S. Wanamaker, Columbia, S. C., chairman of the association.

Says Cotton Growers Prosper.

Basing his conclusions on government crop reports, Governor Allen estimated that cotton growers are making as much money, with cotton at 35 cents a pound, as Kansas farmers are making from their wheat, at $3.25 a bushel.

"Kansas farmers are doing everything in their power to increase the wheat yield so that every one may have bread, but it seems that the cotton growers are trying at the same time to prevent the same peo-

Martial Law Asked By Columbus Labor During Mill Strike

Union Men Object to Special Deputies and Call on Gov. Dorsey to Replace Them With Troops

Columbus, Ga., March 24.—Resolutions requesting martial law for Columbus during the strike of cotton mill workers in place of the present system by which special deputies guard the factories were adopted tonight at a mass meeting attended by representatives of organized labor here, it was announced. The union men asserted that the special deputies, granted police authority by city and county officials, are paid by the mill operators, and that clashes between deputies and strikers are due to actions of the former. The chief disorder has been as mill employees pass the union picket lines morning and evening.

A copy of the resolution was ordered sent to Governor Dorsey and a committee was appointed to take up the matter with Sheriff Beard and Judge Howard, of superior court, tomorrow.

It was said here to be the first time organized labor had ever asked for a declaration of martial law during a strike.

For 'Hero' Story Aviator Is Tried By Court-Martial

Claim of Capt. Chamberlain That He Downed Many German Machines Is Doubted—Chamberlain Belongs to Marine Corps.

London, March 24.—The court-martial in the case of Captain Edmund G. Chamberlain, of San Antonio, Texas, an officer of the United States marine corps, the story of whose exploit in bringing down a number of German machines in an air battle while he was on a visit to the British front last July, has been under investigation for some time, was begun at American navy headquarters here this morning. Captain Chamberlain was formally charged with "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals" and with "falsehood."

He Pleads Not Guilty

Captain Chamberlain pleaded not guilty to the charges and specifications in each case.

Captain H. W. Harrison, of the navy, presided over the court, which was composed of naval and marine officers. The defendant officer was represented by a civilian lawyer, D. Harper, and assisted by Major S. Williams, of the marine corps.

The day was spent largely in jockeying on the admission of reports of Chamberlain's alleged exploits, and recommendations for distinctions. Donald Harper, counsel for the defense, objected to the manner in which the judge advocate planned to get them into the record.

Lieutenant Commander W. A. Edwards, Vice Admiral Sims' aid for aviation, told of receiving alleged official reports of the exploits, as they were widely published, and of preparing a letter for Admiral Sims, recommending Chamberlain for the medal of honor and promotion in rank. The letter was forwarded to

NAVY SEAPLANES LEAVE ROCKAWAY TO CROSS OCEAN

Long Island Is Selected as Starting Point for the Flight Across Atlantic Which Will Be Attempted in May.

ROUTE ACROSS OCEAN NOT YET DETERMINED

While the Planes Will Start From Rockaway, Final Jumping Off Place Will Be Farther Up the Coast, Possibly at Newfoundland Point.

Washington, March 24.—Naval seaplanes which are to attempt a flight across the Atlantic ocean to May will start from Rockaway Beach, L. I., but the actual "jumping off" place will be much farther up the coast, possibly at some point in New Foundland. Whether the machines will steer a direct course for Ireland or follow the longer route via the Azores, apparently has not yet been determined.

Base Is Sought.

Acting Secretary Roosevelt announced today that the destroyer Barney had been ordered to proceed to New Foundland to investigate the harbor facilities along the coast for the purpose of determining the best base from which the planes could put out overseas and harbors in which landings could be made in the event it became necessary

FIRST STRAW HAT OF SEASON HERE; SPRING HAS COME

Well, it's here!

The annual hero has won his crown of laurel and has refused said crown for a lid of straw. The first straw-hatted man was seen yesterday afternoon on Peachtree, just across from the Piedmont.

Now, we know spring is on the way. Other signs may fail. The sun may prove coy and retire again behind the skirts of winter, the weather man may fail and the birds may postpone their springtime opus. All the signs may fail, until the first straw hat blossoms forth. Then we know that summer is truly coming.

It is rumored "on the street" that a palm beach suit was glimpsed in the purlieus of the Trminal station a few days ago, but this is not authenticated. It is considered doubtful whether anyone of sufficient courage could have been found to wear a palm beach with the hosts of "flu" germs still stalking round the country.

But, at any rate, the straw hat is with us and it is predicted that now that the first sacrifice has been cast into the lap of Monseiur Fashion, the blossoming straws will quickly fleck the sea of bobbing heads along the great highways.

"Dry" Period Near, Atlanta Drinkers Keep Judge Busy

More Than 25 Cases in Recorder's Court Monday—Women Claim Male Friends Responsible for Their Actions.

With the first of July near, when a "dry" period will come upon the nation, Atlanta judges of good liquor—though they get little opportunity for testing quality, having to be content with quantity—are keping Recorder George Johnson busy.

Monday he was faced by a docket of 178 cases, and out of this number some twenty-five or thirty were based on the possession for the enjoyment of liquid refreshment of the kind that is barred by Georgia laws. In all but two cases the defendants were bound over, the majority of them in $100 bond. This was the largest number of such cases he has tried in one afternoon in some time, said the recorder.

In a number of cases the defendants were women, and in the majority of these instances they told the judge that their condition was the result of the insistence of gentlemen friends.

One pretty little woman told the recorder that a soldier friend had furnished the liquor, and that while she was under its influence, had tried to steal a diamond ring valued at $650. In her case the judge let her go on the payment of a $3 fine.

In another case it developed that the condition of one of the women was the result of a mixture of liquor and paregoric.

Peace Congress Delay Proving Best of Fuel For the Bolshevik Fire

Present Crisis as Dangerous as That of March, 1918, When Germans Began Great Drive, Says Frank Simonds.

NO UNITY OF COMMAND AT PEACE CONFERENCE

Little Peoples That Might Have Held Back Bolshevik Peril Have Been Neglected and Have Become Bolshevik Material—Delay About Peace May Also Cause Germany to Go Bolshevik.

By Frank H. Simonds.

Paris, March 24.—(Special Cable to The Constitution.)—With the present week we have come to the anniversary of the great military crisis of the recent war, when Germany almost triumphed in the attack of March 21 towards Amiens. We know now that the German success was due primarily to the absence of unity of command on the allied side, and that supreme disaster was only averted because in a moment of utmost peril the allies turned to Foch.

Grave Situation Reached.

Today, after four months of armistice and the peace conference, we are in a certain sense reaching a situation strangely and unpleasantly reminiscent of last year. The absence of unity of command in the peace conference in the last four months has made possible a new offensive, the extent of which is still undisclosed, but the menace of which is daily growing before all eyes. This is the peril of Bolshevism. With such information as reaches us from America comes no hint of the extent to which the Bolshevik danger of Europe is appreciated. There seems to be in America a certain calm confidence that Bolshevism is a thing incapable of passing the Atlantic, just as there is in Wilsonian circles here a belief that Bolshevism will surrender without condition, the moment it finds itself in the presence of the league of nations actually organized. Whether Bolshevism could cross the Atlantic or not must be problematical. That Bolshevism may arrive at the channel or even cross it into Britain within the next year is at least believed by many serious people in Paris and out of it.

League No Remedy for Bolshevism.

As for the notion that the league of nations carries any remedy for Bolshevism, this is simply preposterous. Bolshevism is, as much as it is anything, an attack upon the theory and system of private property. It is purely and simply communism. It is class warfare, directed against all our political and economic theories in the western world. It seeks to govern the world by masses of the least skilled labor, it is systematically killing all men of capacity and ability in Russia. It wars upon nationalism, upon patriotism, upon all that we have been accustomed to regard as organized civilization. Its only liking for the league of nations is based upon the conviction that the league of nations will disarm exactly those forces which might otherwise resist Bolshevism and so far this is an accurate conclusion.

Now, what exactly is the situation? In the first place, Europe and America in the present of domestic opposition resigned the policy which might have involved the expenditure of some life and some treasure, but would have meant a decisive battle against Bolshevism by the allied armies. The first proposal that we should carry the war into Russia with our own victorious armies was vetoed by all the governments of the great powers in the alliance, because it was recognized that the people of none of them would consent to the sacrifices which would have to be made, sacrifices in men and in money.

The People Said "No."

The people of the victorious nations said: "We have suffered enough; we are exhausted and we will fight no more."

There was, then, a second line of policy. It lay within our power to support the Ukrainians, the Rumanians, the Poles and the people of the Baltic provinces who had a sense of nationalism more or less strongly defined, who had in the case of the Ukrainians a system of private property and small peasant holdings, which endangered the Bolshevist program. We might have limited Bolshevism to that Muscovite faction of Russia which only in the last two centuries has added to itself the people of the fringes. The Rumanians, the Poles, the Luthuanians and the Ukrainians asked nothing better than allied support in money, in material, and in officers to make resistance at the frontiers of Russia and throw Bolshevism upon Moscow. But this was four months ago. Once more, we did nothing.

As a consequence today Paris is informed that the Bolshevists have

BOLSHEVISM JARS PEACE CONGRESS

Events in Hungary Arouse Leaders to Need of Haste—Denied That Delay Is Due to League of Nations.

Paris, March 24.—President Wilson met Premiers Clemenceau, Lloyd-George and Orlando at the foreign office at 3 o'clock this afternoon for an hour's conference before the assembling of the supreme war council.

Both the conference and the supreme war council were held amid a feeling of concern over the revolutionary developments in eastern Europe and the lack of definite results thus far reached in the Paris conference in stabilizing European conditions.

Wilson Urges Speed.

President Wilson was known to regard the situation as serious, and as calling for energetic action toward hastening the work of the conference to completion, and there was reason to believe that this would be one of the main subjects before both meetings, rather than the formal questions on the program.

The advocates of the league of nations maintain that it is in no way retarding the progress of the peace treaty, as the league meetings are held at night and are nearing conclusion, whereas the obstacles to the treaty are on questions of principle, on which the premiers thus far have been unable to secure an agreement.

The war council today again dealt with Poland, which question is close to a settlement. It is understood that the recommendations of the Cambon committee for a Polish corridor across East Prussia to the Baltic will prevail, despite the objections raised by Premier Lloyd-George. The Polish divisions at present in France will probably proceed to the Baltic and may land at Koenigsberg, instead of Danzig, in order to avoid a clash with the Germans over Danzig.

League Amendments Considered.

The league of nations commission resumed its sessions at 8:50 o'clock tonight, President Wilson presiding. The commission is expected to sit until midnight. It was not believed that the large number of amendments would be completed and the revision of the covenant concluded without another meeting.

The amendments have been divided into three classes: First, those by neutrals; second, those by an American senator; third, those framed by President Wilson, Colonel House and Lord Robert Cecil. The last named group includes all points which the framers of the instrument believe will clarify its meaning and satisfy objections in all quarters.

The text of the speeches of Senators Lodge and Knox and the main points of the recent debate between Senator Lodge and Dr. Lowell are bing gone over in shaping these changes.

Main Obstacles to Peace.

According to reports, President Wilson's view is that the two main obstacles to an early conclusion of peace are reparations for war damages and the Franco-German Rhine frontier. The belief was expressed by those conversant with the president's view that this situation will be clearly and definitely presented to the premiers and, if need be, a suggestion will be made that they remain continuously together until these two difficulties are met and overcome.

The expectation was also advanced that any doubts still remaining on the question whether the league of nations would or would not go into the peace treaty would be settled in some quite definite understanding among the premiers who are the controlling influence of the conference.

Norval Richardson Tells of Reception To Wilson in Rome

Program Makers Went Back to the Days of Marcus Aurelius for Many Features Used, Says Noted Author.

Norval Richardson, one of the youngest of American diplomats, who, as first secretary to Thomas Nelson Page, ambassador to Italy, spent seven years in Rome and other points of interest in Italy, is in Atlanta for several days as the guest of his brother, Hugh Richardson.

Mr. Richardson has written a series of articles and a history of the part America played in the great world war and the love the people of Europe have for Woodrow Wilson. In discussing the happenings abroad for the past years, Mr. Richardson says:

Great is the appreciation of Italy, not only of what the people of the United States have done, but of our leader, Woodrow Wilson," and here Mr. Richardson indicated in his comments that the distance between Italy and his own country had not separated him from the spirit of loyalty and appreciation of the leader of the nation.

Mr. Richardson, though among the youngest of American diplomats in

HUNGARY'S BREAK AWAKENS ALLIES TO DEADLY DANGER

Reported That Bolshevik Army, 70,000 Strong, Has Crossed the Dniester River and Is Advancing Westward.

PEACE AND ANARCHY OPPONENTS IN RACE

That's the Way Delegate to Paris Conference Puts the Situation—Hungarian Bolsheviki Send Greetings to the Russian Soviet Leaders.

Washington, March 24.—Advices to the state department today from three widely separated European sources tended to increase the anxiety of officials over the situation in Hungary. Bolshevik elements apparently had assumed complete control of the government of Budapest with a threat of renewal of hostilities.

There was no indication as to the extent of the control of the new regime beyond the capital and in the absence of this and other details officials were reluctant to discuss the situation at length. It appeared from today's advices, however, that the crisis resulted from the line of demarkation established by the peace conference in circumscribing the territory of Hungary and the general economic situation in Budapest.

The recognition of the extreme claims of the Rumanians and Czecho-Slovaks and the establishment of neutral zones between these lines and the limits allowed to Hungary, which zone was to be held by the French until the final peace treaty was completed, was said to have been more than the old Hungarian government was able to accept and remain in power. It was suggested that the fact that these lines were not to be the final limitations of the new Hungarian state was not appreciated by the Hungarians, who apparently proceeded upon the theory that they were to lose even the neutral zone occupied by the French.

The Safety of Foreigners.

The safety of foreigners was a feature of the news that appeared cheering to state department officials. A number of Americans are in what was formerly Austria-Hungary on various missions for the peace conference and the inter-allied food commission, but most of them are in Vienna.

Senator Hitchcock, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, in a statement referred to the situation in Hungary and said he believed it would do much to wipe out differences between the nations represented at the peace conference and would aid in bringing about final adoption of the league of nations plan.

State department officials who are familiar with conditions heretofore existing in Hungary were surprised by the rapidity with which Bolshevism swept into control in Budapest, and were inclined to doubt that it had succeeded in reaching out of the cities to include the peasant agricultural class. The peasants were said to be well satisfied with their treatment under the land-owning class and consequently would not be fertile field for the propagation of Bolshevik theories. One official suggested that the inclusion of peasants in the new government, called the "revolutionary government of workers', peasants' and soldiers' councils," instead of, as in Russia, the government of the "workers' and soldiers' councils," might be an attempt to persuade the peasants to join the movement.

Revolution Accomplished.

Today's advices came from Belgrade, Berne and Copenhagen, and related to different features of the movement. Each, however, referred to the revolution as an accomplished fact. The Serbian advices declared that the new Magyar government had announced that hostilities would begin last Friday night, but they did not state against whom the hostilties were ordered or whether they had actually begun.

The Berne dispatches threw some light on the personnel of the new government. The appointment of Bela Kun as minister of foreign affairs was particularly disturbing to officials, as he was for some time an aide-de-camp of Leon Trotzky in Russia. The new minister of war was described as having been an orderly in the second army who was once punished for indiscretion in military affairs.

IT IS PEACE OR ANARCHY.

London, March 24.—Reuter's Paris correspondent says the urgency for concluding peace may be read in the decision of the great powers today to make a big effort to have the peace treaty ready a week hence. The final shaping of the peace terms, the correspondent adds, will be the sole subject of discussion between President Wilson and the premiers within the next few days, and during that period it is not likely the supreme council will meet.

"As one delegate puts it," the correspondent adds, "'It has become a race between peace and anarchy.'"

BOLSHEVIKI ARMY CROSSES DNIESTER.

London, March 24.—A Bolshevik army of 70,000 men has crossed the river Dniester south of Lemberg, according to a Zurich dispatch received in Paris and forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph company. The army is said to be commanded by Major Georgy and is composed mainly of Hungarians and Bulgarians who were prisoners of war in Russia.

Copenhagen, March 24.—A dispatch from Budapest says the soviet government has occupied all theaters and music halls and arranged for revolutionary plays and addresses on the significance of the revolution.

CZECHO-SLOVAK ARMY MOVES INTO HUNGARY.

Copenhagen, March 24.—A Czecho-Slovak army has been sent against Hungary, according to an official report received in Vienna and forwarded here:

ENTENTE TROOPS REPORTED DISARMED.

Berlin, March 24.—A special dispatch to the Freiheit announces the disarmament of entente troops at Budapest. It is unconfirmed, however, and appears questionable.

GREETINGS SENT RUSSIAN REDS.

Copenhagen, March 24.—Reports of wireless exchanges between Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier of Russia, and the foreign representative of the new Hungarian communistic government are received in advices from Budapest. Lenine was told that the Hungarian proletariat had seized power and had introduced a proletariat dictatorship. Greetings were sent to Lenine as "leader of the international proletariat." In greeting the Russian proletariat, the new Hungarian government expressed solidarity with the revolutionary movement.

In his reply Lenine stated that he had submitted the Hungarian greeting to the Bolshevist congress at Moscow which had received it with great enthusiasm. He added:

"In order to communicate between Moscow and Budapest and upon the military situation it is necessary to maintain permanent wireless communication between the two cities." He concluded by extending "communist greetings and a handshake."

At the first meeting of the new Hungarian government in Budapest Sunday, a dispatch from Berlin says, a soldiers' and workmen's council for entire Hungary was appointed, according to plans entered into with the agents of Lenine. The council immediately started preparation of a bill for the socialization of all industrial activities.

ENTENTE BLAMED BY HUNGARIANS.

Basel, March 24.—Budapest was calm on Saturday, according to advices reaching here from that city. Business was, for the most part, suspended, but the streets were animated and posters were displayed everywhere, appealing to the people to continue work.

The food commissioner has issued a proclamation, saying:

"As a result of manner in which the entente acted, we have allied ourselves to the soviet republic and have placed ourselves under the protection of the soviet troops. We have advised them of our decision by airplane."

In concluding its proclamation announcing the proletariat dictatorship there, the new Hungarian government said:

"The Czecho-Slovaks, Bourgeoise, Rumanians and annexationsists classes wish to overthrow the Hungarian workers' revolution by force of arms. We are determined, however, to defend ourselves to the last drop of blood against all attacks. With our determination to defend the republic goes the wish to conclude as speedily as possible a peace which will assure means of existence for the Hungarian working classes and make it possible for them to leave at peace with all the peoples of the world."

WARNING TO ENTENTE, SAY GERMAN EDITORS.

Berlin, March 24.—The Berlin press from the extremely radical to the most decidedly conservative, sees in the events which are occurring in Hungary a terrible warning to the entente. This is the view taken, for instance, by the two extreme examples of Die Freiheit and the Tages Zeitung.

"Entente imperialism," says the latter newspaper, "assisted Bolshevism into the saddle in Russia by the frustration of Kerensky's peace plans. It now has raised Bolshevism in Hungary out of the depths of its impotence. If these two lessons should not suffice, a third would carry terrible consequence into the entente lands."

GERMANY DICKERS WITH BOLSHEVIKI

Paris, March 24.—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, the German foreign minister, has sent Carl Kautsky, one of the under secretaries in the foreign ministry, to Moscow to see the chiefs of the soviet government and to furnish an accurate report on the situation which will allow the foreign minister to study methods as to the bringing about of closer political and economic relations with the Russian Bolshevik government, says a Zurich dispatch to The Matin.

GERMANY RELEASES BOLSHEVIK AGENT.

Copenhagen, March 24.—Karl Radek, the leading Russian Bolshevik agent in Germany, who was arrested on February 13 in connection with the Spartacan uprising, has been released by the German government, according to a Berlin dispatch today.

This message reports fresh agitation by the German Spartacans coincident with the Hungarian revolution and reports that in these circumstances the release of Radek has created a bad impression.

The authorities, the dispatch adds, say that Radek entered Germany in a perfectly regular manner and that they have no reason for keeping him under arrest.

Some results of the new Spartacan agitation reported are a serious strike in Lubek, riots at Stettin and the threat of a general strike in Breslau.

NAVY SEAPLANES LEAVE ROCKAWAY

for them to descend during the voyage from Rockaway to the flight base.

Lieutenant Commander J. L. Kaufman will command the Barney, which is one of the most modern destroyers, and Commander P. N. L. Bellinger, of the trans-Atlantic section of the office of the direction of naval aviation, and Lieutenant E. F. Stone, of the coast guard, have been detailed to make the investigation. Unless difficulties with ice floes are encountered, the Barney is expected to return to the United States within about ten days when the officers will submit their report at Washington.

Several Machines Prepared.

In disclosing that the planes would leave the naval aviation station on Long Island, Mr. Roosevelt said it was regarded as preferable to fly the machines to the base to be selected for the flight rather than to transport them by ship. The air craft will be refueled and given a final tuning up before they actually depart overseas.

Several machines are being prepared for the flight and two or more very probably will make the start. Three planes of the NC type have been completed and a fourth is nearing completion at the Curtiss plant at Garden City, N. Y. Extensive tests of the NC-1 have been made and fifty-one passengers were carried on one of her flights.

Whether it will be possible for the machines to carry sufficient fuel to drive them across the ocean has not been made known. They could refuel at the Azores without difficulty and some officers believe it would be entirely possible under favorable weather conditions for them to replenish their gas supply in mid-Atlantic from a ship with which a rendezvous could be arranged beforehand

Plans Carefully Guarded.

Detailed plans of the flight are being carefully safeguarded and there has been no intimation as to whether the machines will keep together or follow different routes. In view of the announcement that destroyers will be stationed along the route to safeguard the crews in the event of accidents, most officers believe, however, the flying craft will follow one course.

The navy department has not entered for the $50,000 prize offered by The London Daily Mail to the first aircraft that completes a trans-Atlantic flight. At the department today it was said that no inquiries had even been made as to the conditions under which the offer was made. Several British firms and one or two individuals are reported to have entered for this prize, but the general belief here is that none of these will be able to make the start in advance of the naval planes.

COTTON GROWERS SCORED BY ALLEN

ple from having clothes," he declared.

"It would be just as baleful for the wheat farmers of Kansas, the corn farmers of Iowa, the hog-raisers of Illinois, or the live stock producers of Texas to deliberately combine to create a shortage in foodstuffs that the famine of the world would pay them toll, as for the cotton interests of the south to combine for that purpose."

"For these reasons, and because I utterly lack sympathy with the purpose of the meeting, I will not be able to accept the invitation," he concluded.

Answer to Governor Allen.

Columbia, S. C., March 24.—J. S. Wannamaker, chairman of the central committee of the South Carolina Cotton association, said tonight after reading Governor Allen's criticism of the acreage reduction movement that it is evident that the governor of Kansas is not informed of the cotton situation of the south. He suggested that he probably does not know that there is no sale for the important cotton seed product, a food commodity, and compares the status of the wheat of Kansas and cotton of South Carolina.

"In the security of a wheat price fixed by the government, Governor Allen is evidently ignorant of conditions surrounding the problems of the southern cotton planter," said Mr. Wannamaker. "He cannot know that the farmers here are not only carrying a large part of their cotton crop for which they are offered a price below the cost of production, but is unable to sell his cotton seed at any price whatsoever. The cotton farmer held his cotton seed as a matter of patriotism and in response to the government's request placed it on the market very slowly. Now he can't sell it at all.

What South Pays Kansas.

"Banks in Kansas and other western states are flooded with money and southern cotton growers will be required to pay $130,000,000 to wheat growers as the cotton growers' proportion of the vast bonus paid to the wheat growers by the government and in addition the planters of the south will be forced to pay the full government price for every pound of flour that they buy. And when it is made into bread it will be with lard adulterated with part of the 100,000 gallons of off-grade sheep oil which the government permitted brought into this country and sold against cotton seed oil.

"Cotton growers should have received 60 to 70 cents for their cotton, middling basis, last fall on a basis of the price for which manufactured goods were sold. However, only on a very small amount of his cotton did he get 35 cents the pound."

DREADNAUGHT IDAHO GOES INTO COMMISSION

Philadelphia, March 24.—The superdreadnaught Idaho, the largest fighting ship afloat, went into commission as part of the United States navy at Camden, N. J., today. The Idaho's crew of 1,407 stood at attention during the transfer of the fighter to the navy. Captain Carl T. Vogollgesang read the orders from Secretary of the Navy Daniels, appointing him to the command of the superdreadnaught.

WHY GLASS RETAINS J. SKELTON WILLIAMS

Washington, March 24.—Secretary Glass made public today a letter to Representative McFadden, of Pennsylvania, replying to Mr. McFadden's inquiry of the authority by which Secretary Glass has continued John Skelton Williams in office as comptroller of the currency and ex-officio member of the federal reserve board. Mr. Glass said his action was based on an act of congress dated March 2, 1895, which was construed in 1906 by Attorney General Moody to provide for continuance in office of all treasury officials after expiration of their term of office and before the appointment and qualification of their successors. The senate failed to confirm the renomination of Mr. Williams.

Referring to Mr. McFadden's letter of inquiry of March 14, Mr. Glass said:

"I am pleased to observe the omission from your second letter of the surprisingly offensive implications and accusations which appeared in the letter of March 14, which I felt obliged to return to you."

J. A. CROSBY MAKES PLAIN STATEMENT ABOUT WIFE'S CASE

Well-Known Georgia Farmer Says Tanlac Relieved Her of Acute Indigestion—Gains Twenty Pounds.

"I think every bottle of Tanlac is worth its weight in gold," said J. S. Crosby, a well-known farmer of Griswoldville, Ga., recently, "and my wife says so, too, for it has been the making of a new woman of her.

"My wife had indigestion so that everything she ate would sour on her stomach and make her feel all bloated up. Gas that rose made her heart beat fast and she had smothering spells that like to have overcome her. The attacks got to be acute, and she had severe pains in her stomach, and vomiting spells that would just about exhaust her. She fell off a whole lot and got so nervous she could hardly sleep and sometimes hadn't the strength to sit up.

"The first few doses of Tanlac started her appetite right and she commenced enjoying her meals and getting her strength back. She has taken several bottles and it sent her weight up 20 pounds, and she hasn't had one of those awful attacks of acute indigestion since. All her nervousness is gone and she sleeps like a baby. She is now as well a woman as she ever was and everybody can see it."

Tanlac is sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., and all other good druggists.—(adv.)

FOR CLEANER CITY STEPS ARE TAKEN

Strong Committees Appointed to Take Charge of Great Campaign During Week of April 19.

That Atlanta, the leading industrial city in the south, and on and after the week of April 14 will also be one of the most beautiful, was assured at a meeting of the committee which has the 1919 "Clean-up campaign," in charge in the general assembly room of the chamber of Commerce Monday afternoon.

Every interest in the city was represented and every person present pledged himself and hundreds of others who will assist to chase every fleck of dirt and filth during this week and keep each separate fleck chased during the entire year.

City Is Divided.

Robert B. Troutman, general chairman of the committee named by the chamber of commerce, announced that the city had been divided into ten districts, and under the supervision of ten women and a chairman in each district, every force in the city would be combined to make this truly "The City Beautiful."

The residential districts are not to have all the attention of the committee this year. The business district, including every alley in the downtown section, is to know the swish of a broom and the tingle of cleanliness that comes alone from the generous application of water.

Schools will play an important part in the clean-up scheme. Every boy and girl in Atlanta will be told the dangers of dirt and the benefits of cleanliness and when the week of April 14 is passed there is no fear that they will not have done their share of the spring house cleaning.

Transportation Solved.

One of the problems of other years has been solved. This is transportation. Complaints have been made heretofore that the rubbish which was collected by the citizens was not removed by the city. This year the work will be so arranged that all vehicles of the city and many borrowed from the county and Camp Gordon and Fort McPherson, will be concentrated on a district until all of the accumulated dirt is removed.

Committees have been appointed by Mr. Troutman to look after all departments of the campaign. The organizations and bodies represented include the women's clubs, churches, merchants, transportation, public health and school and Boy Scouts. The dealers who handle tools and materials which will benefit from a "Paint-up and Clean-up" campaign will be asked to make a special scale of prices for the articles for a period several weeks in advance of the campaign.

The campaign will run from April 14 to 19, inclusive. A special call is sent out to merchants to place the phrase "Clean-up and Paint-up" in their advertisements between the present time and during the campaign, in order that no housewife in Atlanta will not know when the campaign opens and be able to materially assist those sponsoring the campaign.

Lessons Learned in Army.

Mr. Troutman, in opening his remarks at the committee meeting, told of the lesson all the boys who have been in the service learned in sanitation and personal cleanliness. "We want them to come back home and carry out this idea in their city and country," Mr. Troutman said, "and to get them infused with the idea, when the 82d division comes home they must find a city clean and beautiful like those they left in foreign countries."

A special effort of the committee will be directed toward having the city ordinance prohibiting expectorating on the sidewalks enforced.

Mrs. Wilson told of the plans in some foreign cities where business houses placed receptacles in front of the places of business for this purpose, and of how soon men and boys would walk a few steps to deposit cigar and cigarette stumps rather than drop them carelessly where they were standing.

Te committees which will have the active charge of cleaning up Atlanta were announced by Mr. Troutman as follows:

NORVAL RICHARDSON TELLS OF RECEPTION

Europe, has had a bright career in diplomacy and literature. He is in this country at present for a conference with his publishers in New York, as well as to bring certain messages from the embassy in Rome.

Stops in Paris.

He stopped in Paris en route to this country, where he had a conference with Mr. Lansing, and he spent last week in Washington and New York, en route to Atlanta, where he has been for the last few days the guest of his brother, Hugh Richardson.

Mr. Richardson's first diplomatic experience was in Havana, and about the same time his first well-known book, "The Lead of Honor," was published. This book drew from the life of the Mississippi statesman, Sergeant Prentiss for its theme, and was widely read and favorably criticised.

Subsequently, he contributed a number of short stories to the magazines when he received his second diplomatic appointment to Copenhagen.

After two years there he returned to this country and was assigned as second secretary to the American embassy in Italy, when Mr. Page was appointed. Subsequently Mr. Jay, who was first secretary to the legation, was made councillor to the embassy, and Mr. Richardson became the first secretary.

He has held that post successfully and during the period of the war has had many interesting experiences. His book, "The American Ambassador," has been published, appearing first a sa serial in The Scribner Magazine.

Receives Decoration.

The Italian government has conferred upon Mr. Richardson the decoration of the Crown, one which is given only for distinguished services and to few foreigners.

According to the rules of the American diplomatic service he can not accept the decoration while he is in active service, but the record of his accomplishment holds, and the honor of the decoration is his when he is in a position to accept it.

"I have seen no adequate description of the way in which Italy received the president and Mrs. Wilson," said Mr. Richardson in describing the enthusiasm of Italy at the time of the president's visit to Rome.

"The visit lasted only two days, but they were days of real pageantry and probably in no time in the history of modern Rome have such honors been shown any man as were shown President Wilson.

"The program makers went back into the days of Marcu Aurelius for features with which to express their desire for a royal reception.

"Carloads of sand were brought from that part of the country where 'the gold dust' is, and as the sun shone upon it, scattered on the streets from the station to the palace, the procession appeared to be progressing over a carpet of gold.

"All the orders of the nation and the diplomatic corps wore their full dress regalia, in gorgeous design and color. The uniforms of the soldiers of all nations were a part of the pageant, while the decorations were, in scheme, borrowed from those which were used in the days of ancient Rome. Wherever and whenever the president and his party appeared it was an occasion of triumph, and I wish that I could recall some of the many incidents which proved the genuine appreciation of the people of Rome in our president's visit."

A Striking Incident.

Two days before the arrival of the presidential party Mr. Page was starting to the frontier to meet the president, when he said to Mr. Richardson, "Be sure to invite for me a party of sixty to dinner, to meet Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, and do not forget to invite the king and queen."

This entertainment, which was one of the most distinguished social events of the president's visit abroad, was an occasion of great dignity and formality, and the one occasion in the history of the present regime in Italy when the king and queen have gone out of the royal palaces to accept of hospitality.

Mr. Richardson is preparing a series of articles for a northern publication on his experiences in Rome during the present war.

"CAN'T MAKE MY PRAISES STRONG ENOUGH"
Montrose Man Delighted With the Treatment and the Prices at the One-Price Dental Office in Atlanta.
Fifty-two dollars is worth saving. That's what Mr. T. G. Wade, of Montrose, Ga., thinks. Some time ago he visited the One-Price Dental Office, 104½ Whitehall street, corner of Mitchell, in Atlanta. After he got home, he wrote the following letter: "The work you did for me has given perfect satisfaction. I paid you $48, I think, for the job. Several dentists have examined it. I asked them what it ought to have cost. Their reply was: 'You have a $100 job.' Hence I consider that I saved $52. I cannot express my praises strong enough." Satisfactory work and satisfactory prices make a combination that ought to appeal to any one who needs dental work. You will find the One-Price Dental Office thoroughly equipped to handle all phases of dentistry—crowns, fillings, bridgework and extracting. Call and have a free examination made of your teeth; maybe there are some old roots or abscesses that need attention and that are affecting your general health. Call any time.—(adv.)

SPLENDID PROGRAM AT THE BIG BIBLE CONFERENCE TODAY

There will be a splendid program at the big Bible conference which is being conducted at the Baptist Tabernacle, Rev. John Ham pastor, today.

The day will start with a sermon by Dr. James M. Gray, one of the most powerful preachers in Atlanta today, on "Prophecy," which will be a part of the series he will givve each morning at 10 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock Dr. William Evans, a great Biblical student and interpreter, will speak on "Book of Romans." At 2:30 o'clock a great treat is anticipated when Dr. R. E. Neighbours makes his talk on "Spiritualists and Carnalities." At 3:30 o'clock there will be a most interesting sermon on "Book of Daniel," by Dr. W. B. Riley, and at 7:30 o'clock at night Dr. Evans speaks again, this time on "Panoramic View of Book of Revelation."

There is fine music at every service. The conference ends next Sunday.

Child Hit by Automobile.

Rosa Lee Badger, 4 years old, 98 Ivy street, was run over and slightly bruised early last night by an automobile driven by C. S. Pierce, a mechanic, residing at 20 Simpson street. The accident happened near the child's home as she was attempting to cross the street, according to the driver, who said he was prevented from seeing the child by a passing auto truck. After taking the girl to the hospital, Pierce reported the occurrence at police headquarters and gave bond of $100 for his release.

High Tribute Paid By Lieutenant Hall To Kiffin Rockwell

Atlantans sensed some of the thrills experienced by an aviator in action and in combat when they sat Monday night at the Auditorium and listened to Lieutenant Bert Hall, the famous American ace, vividly describe his exploits and those of other intrepid aviators and watched on the screen the many thrills of the air game in the picture, "A Romance of the Air," in which he takes the leading role.

From the proceeds derived from his lecture Monday night, another tonight and again Wednesday night, the Southern Aero club, composed of military aviators, purposes forming the nucleus of a fund to erect a memorial to Atlanta airmen who died in the service. His initial appearance netted a substantial sum for this purpose.

Lieutenant Hall in his bearing is the very alert person one would imagine him to be to emerge successful and victorious on so many occasions when perilous missions took him behind the German lines.

He paid splendid tribute to Kiffin Rockwell, his pal, the young Atlanta aviator who died while serving France. Young Rockwell was the first member of the Lafayette escadrille to win the distinction of bringing down a German birdman, he said. Hall and Major William Thaw are now the only surviving members of this renowned escadrille.

Lieutenant Hall was seven times decorated for bravery in the air. Marshal Joffre and Czar Nicholas bestowed decorations on him in person. He wears the Medaille Militaire, the Cross de Guerro with the Palms, the Cross of St. Vladmir, the Cross of St. George, the Cross of St. Stanislaus and other medals. To the exploits which won him this coveted collection he modestly referred.

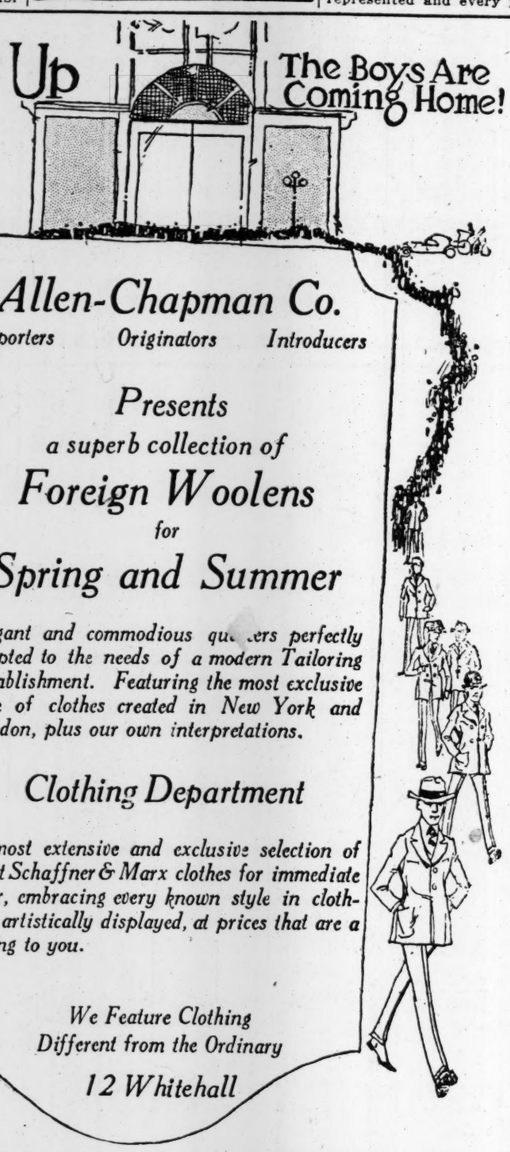

Without the person of the star himself "A Romance of the Air" would be well worth seeing. It was filmed from his book, "En l'Air." The picture is dashing and one follows the screen figures with tense interest throughout. A special symphony orchestra rendered music during the performance.

The Southern Aero club entertained Lieutenant Hall at dinner at the East Lake clubhouse preceding his lecture. Following his appearance at the Auditorium a dance was given at East Lake in his honor.

His lecture tonight and the one Wednesday night will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

HIGHWAY CONTRACTS SENT TO 35 COUNTIES

Letters enclosing the engineering contract and setting out that failure to enter into this contract will annul the claim of the respective county to the federal allotment made by the state highway commission at its meeting last Thursday have been mailed to the thirty-five counties that were awarded the federal funds amounting to $1,392,000.

In the event that the counties do not sign this contract immediately they will forfeit the allotments, which will be reapportioned to the counties that are prepared to proceed at once, as this fund is to be used for emergency work. The letter, which is signed by W. R. Mell, state highway engineer, follows.

Dear Sir: I wish to notify you that your application for federal aid has been granted by the highway commission and $..... was allotted to.....county to aid in the construction of the bridge road located between ..... and .....

Your application was granted conditional upon your immediately executing the engineering contract and that you further assure the department that you are prepared to undertake the construction of the project promptly after receiving notification of its approval by the federal government.

I enclose the engineering contract which has been approved by the highway commission. Failure to enter into this contract will annul the claim of your county to the federal allotment, as the first requirement of the federal government is the preparation of maps, specifications, etc., based on accurate surveys. These form the basis for the contract upon which the federal moneys are paid over to your county. All forfeited allotments will be promptly reapportioned to counties which are prepared to proceed at once with this emergency work. Prompt co-operation is required in order to save this appropriation to our state.

The engineering firm of..... ..... have been appointed to the positions of project engineers to your county and will prepare all data required by the state and federal government. These engineers are thoroughly conversant with the requirements and will look after your interests.

They will be under the direct supervision of the state highway engineer and have put up a $3,000 bond for the faithful performance of their contract with your county.

I will appreciate your immediate attention to this important matter and earnestly request that you notify me at once if you do not care to proceed further.

Respectfully,
W. R. MELL,
State Highway Engineer.

RECORD AUDIENCE EXPECTED FRIDAY TO HEAR GLUCK

The sale of seats for the Alma Gluck concert on Friday night of this week at the Auditorium opened yesterday, with a long line at the box office at the Cable Piano company store. Every indication pointed to an audience which would set a new record for the all-star concert series, which has already presented John McCormack, Josef Hofmann and Jascha Heifetz.

Dozens of the ticket purchasers inquired whether Alma Gluck would sing certain popular favorites, such as "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," and many left requests for this song or another to be added to the program. The requests ranged all the way from operatic arias to "Home, Sweet Home."

The sale will continue through Friday, or as long as any seats are left. The prices are $2, $1.50 and $1, with boxes at $3 a seat. Ten per cent war tax is to be added.

DR. GIDEON SPEAKS ON AMERICANIZATION

The relations of the foreign born citizen to this government was the subject discussed Sunday night by Dr. A. Gideon, of New York, at the Educational alliance on Capitol avenue. The title of the address was "Uncle Sam and His New Americans," the purpose being to give an account of the Americanization movement now being carried on by the United States department of the interior, through the bureau of education at Washington.

Through Rabbi David Marx, director of the Educational alliance and a Gideon, the invitation to speak to the alliance was extended. He chose as his theme "Uncle Sam and His New Americans." He warmly advocated the plan of the United States commissioner of education, P. P. Claxton, who does not favor compulsory Americanization.

The speaker pointed out that the movement faces in two directions, and concerns the foreigner who has come to live in America, as well as the native-born citizen. He asked that a fitting welcome be extended to the new citizens and that the principles of democracy be safeguarded.

He asked that immigrtnts be allowed to retain their own language and individuality, but encouraged the idea of them acquiring the ability to read and write the English language.

Dr. A. Rushkin, of New York, was present and spoke on the subject of "Jewish Education Is a Preparation for American life."

CHARGES ARE MADE AGAINST C. A. UNITS

Washington, March 24.—Delay in the demobilization at Camp Eustis, Virginia, of some units of the 64th coast artillery regiment, recently returned from France, has been due, it was learned today at the war department, to investigation of complaints made by the owners of buildings in which these companies were quartered while in France.

Following the departure of the regiment for the United States it was reported that serious cases of malicious mischief had been discovered at these quarters and also that valuable oil paintings were missing. General Pershing asked that the companies involved be held in service until an investigation could be made. Subsequently, the demobilization of the entire regiment was ordered, but it is understood that responsible officers are to be held in the service until the entire matter is cleared up.

Women Urged to Attend Milk Meeting Friday

In an address before the Atlanta Woman's club Monday afternoon, Mayor James L. Key assured the women present that if he appoints a milk commission it "will not be a nice little lady-like commission with no power to act, but a real commission" that will take the matter in hand and act in the manner best calculated to protect the public and at the same time give a fair deal to the milk dealers. This statement was made in response to a question from Mrs. Hamilton Douglas who asked the mayor whether the commission would have the power to fix the price of milk.

Mayor Key told the women that an effort should be made to encourage milk production as that would be one of the surest means of arriving at a fair price. He suggested that the women of the city attend in force the meeting of the ordinance committee on Friday afternoon, at which time the question of establishing a milk commission will be threshed out, stating that a large attendance of women will be the surest way to convince "some of those old bachelors" on the council committee that there is a real live sentiment on the part of the women back of the milk agitation. Mayor Key's talk was one of several interesting addresses made Monday afternoon.

Plans for City Beautiful.

Major R. B. Troutman, who is just back from two years' service in the army, and who has charge of the civic clean-up campaign this spring for the chamber of commerce, spoke on the plans of the committee to make the clean-up movement this year more far-reaching and of more permanent value than ever before.

R. C. Cubbon, who is assisting the chamber of commerce in the campaign, spoke of the campaigns in other cities, and made a plea for a greater interest in public playgrounds.

Mrs. Nellie Peters Black spoke briefly, introducing Dr. J. L. Campbell who will have charge of a state campaign for the elimination of cancer; and Dr. Campbell spoke for a few minutes immediately after Mrs. Black.

Mrs. Alfred Wilson urged that the women of the city continue interest in vacant-lot gardens, telling of those planted last year under the supervision of the city federation and showing their great value to many of the poorer families of the city.

Miss Rhoda Kauffman talked of the survey which is being made of the feeble-minded population of Georgia and asked the interest and co-operation of the club women. Announcement was made of the appointment of Mrs. B. M. Boykin as state chairman of the Georgia Federation to bring the matter before the clubs.

Plea for Armenians.

Mrs. W. B. Price Smith made a very earnest plea in behalf of the Tallulah Falls school, telling of the splendid work that is being done by the institution and urging the women to aid in maintaining it. She also asked that members of the Atlanta Woman's club, who have made pledges for the support of the school, send in the amount of their pledges to Mrs. T. T. Stevens at once.

A plea for the Armenian Relief Fund was made also, and several other interesting features contributed to the program.

A very enjoyable variation from the speeches was the duet sung by Mrs. Will Chears and Mr. Foster Barnes and the humorous reading by Mr. Barnes.

Despite the very full program, Mrs. Boykin succeeded in drawing the meeting to a close promptly at 5 o'clock, according to the agreed upon plan of the Woman's club, and the members and visitors spent a very pleasant half-hour afterward in social chat. Mrs. Fudge served punch.

Will Demonstrate "Remembering" Art Under "Y" Auspices

Cromwell Blower, of New York, well-known memory teacher, who is spending the season in Atlanta, will give two public demonstrations of the "knack of remembering," under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

In a series of daily articles, The Constitution is now publishing Mr. Blower's instructions on the art of remembering names and faces. This series, written by Mr. Blower personally, embody some of the most valuable business training available to the man of affairs of any line.

The first demonstration will be held in the assembly hall of the chamber of commerce, Wednesday, March 26, beginning at 12:30 sharp; the second demonstration will be given on the same day and date in the assembly hall of the Y. M. C. A., beginning promptly at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Blower is second to none in teaching and demonstrating the art of remembering. "There isn't any more science to the process of remembering things than there are manners in a hotel bell-hop. It's just a knack," says Cromwell Blower.

It will cost nothing to hear him explain this knack. The Y. M. C. A. makes a special appeal to business and professional men and women to be present.

CRISP CO. WOMAN DEAD FROM OIL EXPLOSION

Cordele, Ga., March 22.—(Special.) Mrs. Ella Lawhorn, aged 22, wife of J. O. Lawhorn, well-known farmer of the Warwick district, met a horrible death yesterday morning at the family home, when a can of mixed kerosene and gasoline with which she was starting a fire in the stove exploded and ignited her clothing. She lived only a short while after a physician was summoned. She did not know that gasoline had been added to the kerosene and when the mixture was applied to the hot fire box she was completely covered by the burning liquid. Besides her husband she is survived by three small children.

She Lived 99 Years.

Mobile, Ala., March 24.—Mrs. Nancy Battiste, 99 years old, is dead at the home of her grandson at St. Elmo, near here. Mrs. Battiste is survived by a daughter, a sister, 24 grandchildren, 91 great-grandchildren and eight great-great-grandchildren.

In July, 1914, there were only 1,500 women workers in British banks, against 37,600 now.

Would Amend Ga. Law Of Chattel Mortgages To Encourage Live Stock

Waycross, Ga., March 24.—(Special.)—At a meeting a few days ago of farmers and business men of Ware county the need of an amendment to existing chattel mortgage laws in Georgia as a condition to increasing the use of live stock paper by the banks was stressed by H. A. Seaman, representative-elect from Ware county, who is preparing a bill for this purpose to be introduced in the next general assembly.

Mr. Seaman is an experienced live stock man from the west and his views will have peculiar force on this subject. "The reduction in cotton acreage means increased grain crops and increased live stock through which to profitably market these crops; and farmers cannot buy live stock in quantity needed without bank credit equal to his present cotton credit; and banks cannot safely increase live stock credit on a large scale under existing chattel mortgage laws," declared Mr. Seaman, who emphasized the fact that constructive legislation for increased live stock production urged by the Georgia Land Owners' association should go hand in hand with the state-wide program for reduced cotton acreage.

"One, two, three, four; one, two, three, four—" yelled the drill sergeant.

"My goodness me," said the sweet little thing, "do they really have to teach those ignorant mechanics how to count up to four?"—Gargoyle.

ARMY OFFICERS PLAY STOWAWAYS AND ARE RETURNED

Washington, March 24. — Two army officers, en route home on a transport as stowaways, will enjoy only a brief glimpse of home it was learned today at the war department. They will be shipped back immediately to face charges on their arrival in France. A cablegram reported their presence on the ship and they will be transferred at once on the transport's arrival to the first eastbound vessel to sail.

Similar treatment was accorded five officers, two captains and three lieutenants, who stowed away immediately after the armistice was signed last November. In that case, also, the cable paved the way for their immediate return. Their ship docked on one side of a pier at the opposite side of which lay an outward bound vessel which had been held two hours to await the stowaways. They were marched down one gang plank and up the other and arrived again in France with the unique experience of having made a round trip to New York ice.

When Thos. Jefferson purposely forgot to shave

THOMAS JEFFERSON, who refused a coach-and-six and rode his own horse from his Virginia farm to his inauguration, always retained his practical democracy and was strongly averse to what he termed "hollow social affairs."

Learning that he'd been trapped by some ambitious ladies into an unapproved levee at the White House, Jefferson deliberately walked in upon them straight from his daily ride—dusty, booted, spurred, unshaven. Whereupon the crestfallen society leaders saw that their crafty game was fully understood.

Yet Jefferson, at other times, was fastidiously clean-shaven, using precisely the same kind of a razor which your own father used—a time-proven instrument never improved upon until to its unbeatable shape and balance were added the safety and extra-convenience of the

WAR WAS ENDED BY THE ARMISTICE, RULES U. S. JUDGE

Louisville, Ky., March 24.—Federal Judge Evans, deciding a case which hinged upon an interpretation of when the European war ended, today decided the "war was brought to a close when the armistice was signed," and that President Wilson, "in an official speech," had made that declaration, upon which the court predicated the decision.

Judge Evans refused to take cognizance of a telegram from Attorney General Palmer to the effect that congress declared war, and only congress could terminate it, as far as the United States is concerned, by ratifying a treaty of peace, and brushed aside a quotation from Secretary of War Baker that the armistice meant only a cessation of hostilities.

The case was that of a resident of Louisville charged with a violation of war-time military regulations.

To Sufferers Who Have Sought Relief in Vain

and other forms of Stomach, Blood, Skin and Nerve Diseases.

If you could only read some of the testimony on file in our office from persons who tell of their experience with SULFERRO-SOL, Nature's great nerve tonic and blood purifier, you would be amazed to know that there is a medicine on the market that possesses such extraordinary virtue.

As a result of using SULFERRO-SOL, some of the most remarkable recoveries are reported by those who have been in the advanced stages of Pellagra, Eczema and other skin diseases. Bodies covered with sores; the body of Job couldn't have been worse. Others report relief from years of torture with Rheumatism and the distress of Indigestion. One old man, who had been injured by a terrible fall, and for whose shooting body pains and intense nervousness the doctors could do nothing, got so bad that when he rode on a trolley car he used to put his hands beneath him to break the jar of the car's movements, it disturbed him so. But SULFERRO-SOL took away the nervousness, and put him on his feet after he had almost given up in despair of ever getting well again.

These people Have Used SULFERRO-SOL They Know

"I had Pellagra—great red splotches on my hands and arms, which burned as tho I was holding them over a red-hot stove. I began taking SULFERRO-SOL for the Pellagra, and not only did that disappear, but my stomach and bowel troubles became completely healed. That I am in sound health today is solely due to SULFERRO-SOL."—W. W. Kinnin, Eastlake, Birmingham, Ala.

"I had Indigestion six years so bad I could hardly keep going. At times I was confined to bed for weeks. But I finally found a remedy. My own physician, after noting a change for the better in me one day, asked me what I was doing, and I said, 'Taking SULFERRO-SOL.' And he said, 'Keep right along with it; I believe in it myself."—Nat Williams, Birmingham, Ala.

"I suffered with Pellagra a long time. Nothing did me any good. Upon a friend's advice I tried SULFERRO-SOL, and commenced to improve at once. Within ten days I was back at work and am now well."—Alex R. Tharin, Greenville, S. C.

"I had to resign my position on the police force on account of Rheumatism. Soon after I was advised to take SULFERRO-SOL. In a very short time I felt like a new man."—C. L. Allen, Birmingham, Ala.

"I was overworked and run down. My nervous system was so impaired my work became repulsive. A friend suggested SULFERRO-SOL. I sent for a bottle. It put me right on my feet and actually gave me new life. To those in need of an energizing tonic SULFERRO-SOL is the one greatest remedy in this country."—J. C. Milliken, 1140 Monroe street, Hammond, Ind.

"I was a nervous wreck. Had serious bladder trouble, lumbago and also ringworms. With my husband's consent, I began taking SULFERRO-SOL. Not only did my nervousness leave me. My lumbago ceased to give me trouble. My ringworms dried up and went away. I think SULFERRO-SOL is the greatest remedy ever given to man, and my husband, who ought to know, agrees with me."—Mrs. Dr. C. M. Baldwin, Birmingham, Ala.

"I had Bronchitis and SULFERRO-SOL certainly cured that. It is certainly a wonderful natural medicine and the only one that helped me in many years."—Mrs. J. C. Pilgreen, 7330 Hillman Ave., Birmingham, Ala.

Sulferro-Sol, Nature's Great Nerve Tonic and Blood Purifier, is Endorsed by Physicians.

Physicians seldom endorse a proprietary medicine. But they endorse SULFERRO-SOL. They just had to endorse it. In several instances they saw their patients fail to improve under their treatment, but get better and get well after taking SULFERRO-SOL. Any one, even a physician bound by the ethics of his profession, ought to be fair, and if SUFFERRO-SOL will give the relief from disease that a physician's prescription will not give, it is only right that the physician should be willing to announce the result publicly—as many of them have done—and give SULFERRO-SOL its just due as a means of overcoming disease and pain.

If you have had to endure the tortures of Pellagra, Eczema, Indigestion, Colic, Rheumatism or other form of Stomach, Blood, Skin or Nervous ailment,—even if you have taken medicines and had doctors treat you and do you no good—you still have a great big chance to get relief by taking SULFERRO-SOL. That medicine will mean your physical salvation.

SULFERRO-SOL has been on the market six years and is absolutely free from all poisonous or dangerous substances and can be used by any one, from the youngest to the oldest, with perfect safety. It contains in scientific proportions—iron, magnesia, soda, chalk, aluminum, potash and silica—and no alcohol.

Try a bottle of SULFERRO-SOL. Your druggist can supply you. Refuse to accept any substitute. There is no other medical preparation like SULFERRO-SOL. No other medicine can take its place.

Woman's Meeting At Auditorium.

A mass meeting will be held in the Auditorium Armory on Friday, April 11, at 8 o'clock p. m., in the interest of suffrage for women in the white primaries of Atlanta.

The committee in charge has issued the following statement:

"This mass meeting is absolutely non-partisan and its discussion will exclude every other phase of woman suffrage except the privilege of voting in the primary elections in Atlanta. School suffrage will not be considered, for it would require legislative action and a constitutional amendment.

"The executive committee of Atlanta has absolute control of qualifications for voting in the city primaries and doubtless will include women in the electorate if convinced that the people of Atlanta so desire. We therefore appeal to every citizen of Atlanta to show his confidence in the loyalty and intelligence of women who have never failed to respond to the utmost whenever called upon for public service. We ask you to attend this meeting and join us in asking the executive committee of the city of Atlanta to take the initative in our great commonwealth of Georgia in according justice to her women citizens."

All members holding a membership card or a two-dollar ticket will be permitted to bring an escort on the occasion of the two evening readings.

Matinee Party and Tea.

The guests included Mrs. Palmer, Miss Brown, Miss Gladys Cassels, of Savannah; Mrs. John C. Du Pre, Miss Maude Carlton, Misses Wyckliffe and Annie Dow Wurm, Miss Martha Louise Cassels and Miss Henrietta Davis.

After the performance the guests were entertained at tea at Miss Byrd's home on North avenue.

The tea table had all details of decoration in yellow, the centerpiece a low mound of daffodils, outlined in asparagus fern.

Miss Brown wore black satin with henna colored turban. Mrs. Palmer was gowned in dark blue Georgette, with black hat, and Miss Byrd wore taupe-colored satin trimmed in bands of wool embroidery and turban of brown straw to match.

Spring Fashions Revive Dainty Lingerie Blouse

By Isma Dooly

Women of dainty taste will be glad to learn of the return of the lingerie blouse as one of the features of spring and summer fashions. The news is that the importers and leading business institutions selling clothes for women are showing an infinite variety of the daintiest of lingerie blouses, many of them hand-made and many of them costly because of real lace and the hand embroidery.

For several years the silks, voiles, crepes, and non-washable materials have been used in woman's blouses, which they have worn not only on the more dressy occasions, but for rough and ready wear. Now the prediction is that the beaded waist, and that ornate with sequins, and shiny trimming, is not going to put aside entirely the tub materials for waists and blouses, but that women who can do dainty hand work will find that they can again be stylish in doing hand tucking, hemstitching, and "whipping on," of fine laces which they did during that period when the lingerie blouse and the lingerie gown was the desire of every woman.

This does not mean that the same materials—the voiles, the crepes and the silks—are not going to be worn, but it does mean that they are going to be made more according to the lingerie designs, and that handiwork is going to be in demand. Lace and embroidery both will be combined in the new spring blouse, and women who have little bits of real lace will again pattern waists with the little inlets, and insertions, and medallions which have been formerly used in lingerie garments with such dainty effect.

Two blouses illustrating the return of the lingerie fashion were seen here this week, one of them made of the sheerest voile and filet lace. The waist was half fitting, from the shoulder down, and showed the desirable line which narrow tucks from the shoulder to the waist can give. These tucks were done by hand and between bunches of them was an insertion of filet lace.

The sleeves were likewise tucked lengthwise and finished by an edging of the lace in rather a full ruffle.

Another blouse of similar fashion combined the sheerest embroidery and filet lace with tucks, and both waists opened at the throat, and had collars which rolled back almost to the shoulder.

Another lingerie blouse which expressed the daintiest handiwork was made of a narrow insertion of Valenciennes lace, put together with hemstitched bands of the finest linen lawn.

The old linen and torchon laces will be used in the spring blouses and the heavier and finer laces will be combined in the make-up of the revived lingerie fashion.

The favor which American women have shown for sport clothes has probably brought back the finer blouses, for the sport materials and coats this season are so handsome that waists to be worn with these separate garments must be handsome to correspond. The beautiful satins and silks and the crepe materials and heavier silk and wool fabrics used for sport skirts, as well as the costly materials woven now into sweater coats, and sport coats, require that the waist or blouse completing the toilet should be accordingly handsome, as well as the hat.

All white is being shown a great deal for midsummer suits, gowns and wraps. Nothing is prettier, and though there is much in Atlanta's atmosphere that intimidates Atlanta women in selecting their garments in white or light colors, the fair ones will probably quote as they buy white frocks, "that one might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion."

With the favor for white, and the return of the fashion of the lingerie gown and the lingerie blouse, there will be the usual demand for the white shoes, ties, and slippers, and already Atlanta shops are showing these in buckskin, kid, and duck.

The white veils and the white parasols are already here, and even before midsummer one may expect to see many lingerie blouses with the handsome sport skirts, and the always pretty lingerie gowns, for home and afternoon wear.

For Mr. and Mrs. Deadwyler.

Mr. and Mrs. John Simpkins entertained at dinner last evening in compliment to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Deadwyler, of Athens.

The table had as its centerpiece a basket of pink carnations.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Chamblee, Miss Eleanor Chamblee, Mrs. M. E. Bradley, Miss Minnie May Deadwyler and Mr. W. C. Deadwyler.

Among others who will entertain in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Deadwyler will be Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Deadwyler, Mr. and Mrs. Chamblee and Miss Nell Carpenter.

Dance at Soldiers' Club.

A musical entertainment and dancing party will be given at the Soldiers' club, 190 Peachtree street, tonight. Mrs. J. W. Wills, Mrs. Bun Wylie and Mrs. E. E. Eaton, will be in charge, and Mrs. H. G. Hastings and her committee will supply the decorations.

Twenty-five attractive young girls have been invited and local talent will provide an interesting program. An orchestra will furnish music for dancing, which will follow the program of music.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, chairman woman's committee War Camp Community service, wishes all soldiers, sailors and marines in the city to know that they will receive a cordial welcome. Refreshments will be served.

Council of Jewish Women

The regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta section of the Council of Jewish Women will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Sunday school auditorium of the temple. A short symposium on woman suffrage will be held, and a few minutes' discussion will be given of the fifth Liberty Loan by Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick. social tea will follow.

MAJOR JOHN CORRIGAN RECEIVES SCHOLARSHIP

A scholarship at the University of Paris is the honor that has been awarded to Major John Corrigan, Jr., former Washington correspondent of The Constitution, and an English university has conferred a like distinction on Lieutenant R. J. Longstreet, a member of the 82d division and widely known in Atlanta. News of the good fortune of both officers was contained in recent communications from them to relatives in the city.

Major Corrigan is studying law, political economy and French, and his course will cover four months. The courses were arranged as part of the plans to keep occupied and interested the officers and men of the American army whom it is still necessary to keep in Europe. A limited number of scholarships were recently offered by English and French universities to officers and soldiers of high qualification and great care is exercised in making these selections. French universities offer extensive courses in letters, law, science and medicine, while the British institutions offer general subjects of high grade.

During the early period of America's participation in the war Major Corrigan volunteered his services and was commissioned a captain. He soon merited promotion and was made a major.

Before entering the army Lieutenant Longstreet graduated at Stetson university, DeLand, Fla., in the department of law. He received his commission at the close of the first officers' training school at Fort McPherson.

DETAILS OF EXPLOITS BY OLD HICKORY UNITS

Newport News, Va., March 24.—Details of exploits of some of the units of the Thirteenth division, which arrived here yesterday aboard the steamship Finland became known today.

The 114th field artillery, commanded by Colonel Luke Lea, participated in virtually all the combats in which the "Old Hickory" division distinguished itself as a fighting American unit. The regiment was fortunate, however, not one member being killed in combat.

The 116th machine gun battalion, commanded by Major W. W. Pierce, of Goldsboro, N. C., sustained heavy casualties. During the fighting in the Argonne the battalion was called upon to hold a line throughout the night. The next morning the men started to rest billets, almost half the members of a number of companies having been killed or wounded. Hardly had the men left their positions when they were ordered to return to the fighting lines. Their display of energy and relentless devotion to duty, officers said, stood out as one of the most spectacular exhibitions of fighting in that vicinity.

"I'm glad the war's over," said the first tramp.

"Why?" asked the other.

"Now mebbe somebuddy'll have some old clothes to give away."—Kansas City Journal.

And So They Were Married

EPISODE THREE—(Jealousy)
By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

(Copyright, 1919, by Public Ledger Co.)

CHAPTER XX.

When Scott told Ruth in a few simple words that he was willing, in fact, wanted her to have wholesome men friends, she might have understood if they had gone on talking about it. She might have tried, at any rate, to see his viewpoint. As it was, she made no effort to see beyond the impression his words first made on her. She thought that in that way he was telling her that he did not intend to give up his friendships with women, and that he was giving her the privilege, therefore, of amusing herself in the same way with men. She thought, too, that, if he felt he could trust her to other men, he simply did not care enough to be jealous.

That was the way matters stood when a few days later, after several telephone calls, Ruth consented to go out with Isabel to tea. It was the first invitation she had accepted from Isabel since the unfortunate cabaret affair, and it was not the old Ruth who accepted. The old Ruth never went anywhere without a glad heart, without a certain spontaneity, without anticipation of what the engagement would bring forth. The Ruth who met Isabel in the lobby of one of the fashionable hotels was vaguely different.

Ruth had suffered, and in a way had grown. She had unfortunately become hard; she had lost a precious something; she had suffered a hurt of the first faint illusions we have about things that can never again be quite healed. At first she had believed it impossible to go on feeling as she did, but her pride kept her up. She had not slept at all that first night; she just thought and thought. Only one night before out of her entire married life had she fallen asleep without making peace with Scott. Even now she wavered; the impulse to go over to him, to feel his arms about her, was almost too much, but her pride kept her away. He had flung down the gauntlet, and she would accept the challenge. After all, what did it matter now? What did anything matter? Life was not what she had thought it would be. Scott no longer loved her. She must do something; she must have something to keep her from thinking. If she could not work as Helen Townsend was doing, she could at least frivol with Isabel and those of her class. Isabel managed to keep going. Very well, then, she, Ruth, would keep going in the same way.

"And in the end I'll be a lot more contented," she argued to herself. "There is no happiness where one feels as deeply as I have allowed myself to think of Scott."

That resolution was what found Ruth at 4:30 half buried in the depths of a big chair waiting for Isabel.

Isabel breezed in at a quarter of five.

"Am I late? I'm sorry. Heaven knows I should have tried not to be. I never get you to come out with me anywhere these days."

Ruth laughed gayly. "I know I've been a molly-grub," she admitted, "but I've turned over a new leaf."

Isabel looked at her curiously. "How did that happen? Ruth, you haven't quarreled with Scott, have you? That would be funny."

"Why, don't all married couples quarrel?" They were standing together in the corridor. Life passed them in all its phases as they talked. Fashionably-dressed women waited for others or joined men. Laughter was rife, every one seemed happy, and yet underneath many of these people must be as unhappy, as discontented as he was, thought Ruth. That was life.

"Then you two devoted people have quarreled?" Isabel returned.

"Nonsense," Ruth said briskly, "nothing of the kind. I've simply decided to have some fun in life, to accept some of your ideas."

"Well, we'll begin this afternoon," Isabel said without any other remarks. "I didn't know how you would feel about this, but I guess it's all right. Bob Carter is going to meet me here, and at the last moment he telephoned that he was bringing another man. I think you'll would be furious, you're such a little nun."

Ruth had a momentary throb of pain. Now that she was actually embarked on this thing, she realized how genuinely her entire spirit rebelled against anything of the kind. A wave of intense feeling for Scott swept over her. She loved him, she loved him! She closed her eyes a moment at the physical thought of him, then a cold nausea swept over her at the remembrance of his attitude. How could she forget herself to the extent of caring like that for a man who did not care for her? Scott wanted her to leave the way clear for him; well, she could do it—other women did. Ruth summoned all her pride to her aid as she responded to Isabel's light remark.

"Nun! I really don't deserve that, now do I?"

Isabel did not reply to this. She saw across the room the two men she had mentioned, and exclaimed, "There they are now."

The next minute Ruth looked and saw two small, good-looking men coming toward them. They were sleek, well-groomed types; the kind of men Ruth had known all her life, and yet how, meeting them this way, without Scott, gave her a sinister feeling that almost frightened her. Isabel was as usual, beautifully poised, gracious. She gave the entire meeting, a casual everyday aspect, and yet Routh found herself nervously wetting her lips, expectantly wondering what would happen next. She felt almost panicky; marriage had changed her so much in so short a time.

Calls to repentance and consecration for spirit baptism of power have been responded to in a most gratifying manner. Regular Wednesday afternoon gathering also. The NEW EDISON brings HEMPEL to your home

THE fall evening closes in. You light the lamp, draw the shades, and then the family gathers about The New Edison, "The Phonograph With a Soul." You slip on a Re-Creation of Frieda Hempel's voice. What miracle is this? Through the house soars that brilliant voice, as real as if Hempel were there in the room. Borne on the waves of the melody you float clear of the harassing details of household cares or office worries. You've entered a dream world, a realm of quiet content.

One after another the great singers of Grand Opera, evoked by the magic of Edison's genius, enter the room and render you their all. Were they there in the flesh, they could offer no more. For, as more than 2,000 Edison tone tests have proved, the living artists can give no more than their Re-Creations give you. By the test of direct comparison, the artist and instrument are indistinguishable. Frieda Hempel on the Metropolitan stage and Frieda Hempel on the New Edison are one and the same.

The more music you hear, the more you'll want to hear. Meet music half way. You'll find it more than a source of pleasure, it will bring you lasting happiness.

A Home Made Gray Hair Remedy

Gray, streaked or faded hair can be immediately made black, brown or light brown, whichever shade you desire, by the use of the following remedy that you can make at home:

Merely get a box of Orlex powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extras to buy. Dissolve it in ½ oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Directions for mixing and use come in each box.

You need not hesitate to use Orlex, as a $100.00 gold bond comes in each box guaranteeing the user that Orlex powder does not contain silver, lead, zinc, sulphur, mercury, aniline, coal-tar products or their derivatives.

It does not rub off, is not sticky or gummy and leaves the hair fluffy. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. —(adv.)

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-Made

Here's an easy way to save $2 and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—(adv.)

WAS ALMOST DISCOURAGED

Constant Headache and Much Soreness and Pain Nearly Got the Best of This Harrisburg Lady, But Cardui Made Her Well and Strong.

Harrisburg, Ark.—Mrs. J. M. Needham, living near here, states: "When . . . began working on me I . . . suffered a great deal. I had so much soreness and pain in the lower part of my body I could hardly get up when I was down. I would have severe pains, all across my back, and my sides hurt me all the time. I would have headaches constantly, especially the back of my head and neck. I was almost discouraged with my condition when I thought of Cardui, and decided to see what it would do.

I saw an improvement at once after the first bottle. I kept it up and the result was wonderful. I took altogether four bottles. I grew stronger, better appetite, less pain until I was well. I think Cardui is a Godsend to suffering women, and I certainly can praise it, and do so."

For more than 50 years Cardui has been in general use and in that time thousands have written to tell us how it helped them back to health and strength.

MARY REGAN

A Story of Love and Mystery Staged Amid New York's Brilliant Night Life.

By LEROY SCOTT

(Copyright, 1919, for The Constitution.)

Opening Chapter

Clifford, the detective who believes in giving criminals a chance to reform, is seated in the Grand Alcazar, the brilliant New York restaurant. Sub-consciously he watches for Mary Regan, who went out of his life six months before, following his declaration of love for her.

Daughter of a professional crook, niece of another, Mary Regan is a fascinating woman. Despite the handicaps of hereditary, Clifford still believes in the intrinsic soundness of her heart. He believes that her better nature will survive, long after the implanted instincts to crime have burnt themselves out of her life.

While he waits, Clifford talks with "Uncle George," one of Broadway's most unique characters, who has invited him to dinner at the Alcazar.

Uncle George warns Clifford of a coming attempt at revenge on the part of Bradley, ex-chief and grafter, who lost his post by reason of Clifford's exposure of his crookedness.

Does Mary Regan return from her retirement? Does Bradley accomplish his revenge against Clifford? The answer to these questions forms the most fascinating story of love and life and mystery written in years.

"Sure—only. Son"—and the old man spoke gravely—"I'm twice as old as you are, but you should know as well as I know that you really can't get a copper. I mean a clever copper. Count the big coppers that have really been sent away—the smart boys, I mean—and you'll see you have several fingers left to check up your laundry on. That was grand business you pulled on Bradley, and it showed all New York he was a crook. It was worth doing—God, yes! But I said to myself, as soon as I heard of the swell arrest you had made of him, that a classy guy like Bradley would have himself covered and would beat the case when it came to trial. And he sure did beat it!"

"On a technicality!" Clifford was still bitter at the manner in which his old enemy and old superior officer had slipped from what had seemed the sure clutches of the law.

"A technicality, sure. But it got him off, and what more does a crook ask for?"

"But he got reinstated in the police department!"

"But didn't he retire right afterwards, claiming broken health? And don't you and I know his real reason was that his old game was done for and that the public was wise to him? The big trouble with you, son," the old man declared severely, "is that you want a one hundred per cent victory. The best you can hope for with a guy like Bradley is to split the thing fifty-fifty."

"You seem to admire Bradley a lot!" half growled Clifford.

"I do. I hand it to the guy with brains wherever I meet him."

"I don't see how you can be friends with me, then!"

"You're clever, too, son. You're the only one I've ever figured might beat Bradley in a finish fight. And then you're a queer party. Bob—you're square," he drawled. "I've traveled up and down this world of he-and-she grafters, shoplifters, safeblowers, and sure-thing business men, and after it all you know it's right pleasant to sit down in the shade of a square guy. And besides, son," he added, "I said I admired Bradley because he was clever; I didn't say I liked him as a friend. Now, you, Bob, somehow I like you."

"Thanks, Uncle George." There was a moment's silence. "But that's not what you got me here to tell me."

"Perhaps not, son. But what's the hurry? Queer, ain't it," he meditated, "how all the big cops, when they leave the police department, open a private detective agency? I hear Bradley's doing great business since he started out as a private detective."

"Licensed blackmailer — that's what he is!"

"Sure, son, that's what they all are. A client tells a private sleuth secrets, and retains him to get information about some other party—and is held up for a big fee. The sleuth gets the information, and then makes the second party pay by threatening to expose him—second hold-up; and then makes the first client pay again by threatening to expose the original secret—third hold-up. Oh, it's a rich game Bradley's switched into!"

"Once more, Uncle George—that's not what you got me here to tell me."

"Perhaps it's not really so much I've got to tell you. Mebbe it's occurred to you"—meditatively, slowly—"that since the big upset you gave him, Bradley isn't exactly what you might call in love with you."

"Not exactly."

"Well, I heard it from a friend who's got a friend who's got a mother-in-law who listens to little birds—and the dope runs that Bradley is out to square matters with you."

Clifford nodded. He had expected something of the sort.

"Did this little bird relay any information as to just what Bradley was going to do?"

"None that got to me. But, son, I'd keep my eyes pointed in all directions, and be careful of the friends I made, and be careful of the cases I got drawn into. It may be a long time coming, and God only knows in what direction it'll come from. Bradley knows how to handle people so they never know they're being handled—and he's likely to hit you through almost anyone. Look out, son. This is serious. There'll be big doings."

Clifford gazed steadily at the old worldling. Indeed, there must be something—and big!—or else Uncle George, whose general attitude in matters of morals, police, and criminals was one of genial "laissez-faire," would not have brought him this warning. He knew from experience the craft and power of Bradley—his subtle patience in working out his designs, his patience in waiting apparently quiescent for the ripe moment—the swiftness and might with which he struck when the instant came to strike.

Automatically, swiftly, Clifford's mind flashed forward in search of possible weapons, of direct and devious schemes, that the fertile-brained Bradley might be contriving against him.

CHAPTER II.

The Return of Mary Regan.

Suddenly all conjectures concerning Bradley were swept utterly from his mind. Down the gilded red-carpeted stairway that led from what the Grand Alcazar termed its "ballroom de luxe," there came—though this was not the figure Clifford first noted—a short, full-bodied, ornately dressed man, with a bald crown and a smile of engaging amiability. Beside him, and a half-head taller—and this is what Clifford first saw—walked a slender young woman, in an evening coat of rose velvet, her rounded throat gleaming a dusky marble from the soft shadows of the furred collar. Her face was the rose-tan of early autumn leaves, and her dark eyes gazed straight before her with a composure so complete that it seemed to announce a haughty indifference to all the world.

"Mary Regan!" ejaculated Clifford, stupefied.

Uncle George seemed not the least startled by Clifford's exclamation. He turned—and then there was surprise enough in his voice:—

"Hello—Peter Loveman with her!"

Clifford, recovered from his brief paralysis, arose and hurried between the tables. But the pair had already turned into the entrance and did not note him. As Clifford came into the gilded and bepalmed lobby, he saw her, aided by four eager Grand Alcazar flunkeys and by Loveman, looking a grotesquely small grand opera impresario in his silk hat and fur coat, stepping into a closed car. By running Clifford could have caught her, or by calling he could have gained her attention. But at that instant he remembered the essence of their bargain, that he should make no attempt to seek her out until she sent for him. That remembrance checked him; the door closed upon the rose-velvet figure, the car slid off through Broadway's incadescent brilliance, and she was gone.

Forgetful of where he was, Clifford stood bareheaded and stockstill in the lobby. Mary Regan's sudden reappearance out of the silence, the vacancy, of six months' absence, sent his mind flashing over the past, the present, the future, touching in chaotic wonderment the high spots of his strange relationship with her . . . . Daughter of that one-time famous cynic and famous master criminal, "Gentleman Jim" Regan, dead these five years, she had passed her girlhood in the cynical philosophy of the little court surrounding her father—had made that philosophy her own—and, grown into young womanhood, she had joined that great crime entrepreneur, her Uncle Joe Russell, in many of his more subtle enterprises. It was at the beginning of this career that Clifford's life had come into contact with hers. Police Commissioner Thorne had ordered him to "cover" the pair. From the first Clifford had conceived the idea that her criminal point of view was not an expression of her true nature, but was a habbit of mind developed in her by association: and he had proceeded upon the theory that a bigger role, than merely to make arrests, would be to arouse the real Mary Regan to her true self . . . . The conflicts between the two!—her hostility to him!—his ultimate success, or seeming success, when he had broken through her shell of defensive cynicism—and last of all, that parting scene down in Washington Square in the dusk of the on-coming dawn! . . .

SERIOUS BUSINESS.

Now that the strike of railroad clerks is, happily, a thing of the past, it will not be amiss for those who participated in it, and for all other classes of wage-earners, to devote some sober thought to the seriousness of this business of summarily quitting work and going on strike without mature consideration of motives and possible consequences.

In this instance several hundred honest, and, no doubt, well-meaning, employees of the government left their desks, walked out and engaged in a strike which the head of their own order now declares was unwarranted, illegal and in violation of their own union rules and by-laws.

Many of them are men with families or other dependents; they needed the returns from their employment; they could not afford to be out of work; idleness entailed hardship.

While they were out on strike business was more or less tied up; the public was seriously inconvenienced, and the whole community, including the strikers and their families, necessarily suffered.

Now, most of them—practically all whose places were not filled during the strike—are back at work, condemned by the head of their organization for having done an unwarranted and a very foolish thing.

It is a mighty serious thing for a body of employees to go on strike, especially against the federal government; and it is doubly so when such action is taken without consideration of the wise and always timely admonition of Davy Crockett: "Be sure you're right—then go ahead!"

Had those who participated in the recent railway clerks' strike given due heed to that counsel there would have been no strike and everybody concerned would have been the better off!

No wonder those who went out are now silently placing the blame!

OWN YOUR HOME.

The United States department of labor is sending broadcast throughout the country a large poster upon which, in big, black letters and over the signature of Secretary W. B. Wilson, is this statement:

"I want to see every wage-worker own his own home!"

This should appeal to every American citizen who has the wage-worker's interest and welfare at heart, and who wants to see the men and women and children of the masses reap that full share of the enjoyment of life to which they are entitled.

Every man ought to own the roof that shelters him and his family.

It is more important to the wage-worker that he own his own home than it is to the capitalist, because the latter can better afford to pay rent—something that the wage-worker, regardless of how well he is paid, cannot afford to do!

No man who works for a living can afford to pay out his hard-earned money for a thing for which he has nothing to show at the end of the year, save a batch of receipts. That is rent!

On the other hand, every worker can afford to build up an equity in a home of his own, so that every tree he plants, every rose bush he sets out and every nail he drives is not for the enhancement of some other fellow's property, but for the improvement of his and his family's own home!

In Atlanta at the present time there is an almost alarming scarcity of habitable houses for rent; and indications are this condition will be accentuated next fall.

Every man in Atlanta now without a home of his own should look about with the view of acquiring title to a plot of ground upon which to build!

Build your home with the money that is now going for rent!

It's dead easy.

ONLY WAY TO WIN.

Council has designated April 23 as the date for holding the second election upon the million-dollar bond issue and city tax increase proposals.

At a recent election the former proposal carried, while the latter was defeated by a small margin. Because so few voting eligibles voted that the legality of the bond verdict is questionable, the authorities, in order to remove all possibility of doubt on that score, have decided to resubmit both proposals to the people.

The success of both is assured at this election if a representative vote is polled.

Both unquestionably would have carried overwhelmingly at the last election if such a vote had been cast. As it was, fewer than 5,000 citizens participated in that election; and a vote of less than 5,000 in a city of more than 200,000 inhabitants can hardly be considered a "representative" vote!

But the result will be the same in April unless those in charge of this campaign in behalf of Atlanta make a determined, systematic and effective effort to get the voters to the polls.

If, as they did last time, they trust to God Almighty and to individual impulse to move the voters they will again be disappointed.

It is going to take organization; it is going to take organization on an intensive, ward-by-ward, precinct-by-precinct and house-to-house plan to bring about the desired results!

The issues to be decided at this election are of direct and vital importance to every citizen—especially to every taxpayer—of Atlanta.

But it would seem that the citizens are not generally appreciative of that fact. If they were they would not have permitted a rainstorm to have kept them away from the polls and from expressing their will when those subjects were up for determination.

The thing to do now, in light of common sense and of what happened at the last election, is to perfect such an intensive scheme of organization that every voter can be reached in person and fully impressed with the importance of the issues at stake, and what each means to him, to his children and to the community.

That plan was not invoked prior to the last election. Had it been, there can be little doubt that both proposals would have carried by large majorities.

Let us hope that the mistake will not be repeated this time.

CROSSING CASUALTIES.

Statistics recently compiled by the interstate commerce commission show that during the year 1917 a total of 1,777 persons were killed and 4,356 were injured in grade-crossing accidents on railroads in the United States.

These casualties resulted from 3,673 separate and distinct accidents.

Figures covering this class of accidents during 1918 are not yet available, but it is doubtful if they will show any diminution, the probability being that, in view of the extraordinarily heavy rail traffic and the measurable demoralization of the rail working forces during the war year, the 1918 totals will be more ghastly than those of the previous year.

Each year for many years grade-crossing accidents have been increasing somewhat in ratio with the increase in the use of motor vehicles on cross-country highways.

Despite all that the railroads, governmental authorities, state legislatures and "safety first" crusaders have been able to do to impress upon the public the peril that lies in wait at the places where rail and highway intersect, each year more and more automobiles have failed to "Stop, Look and Listen," and paid the penalty!

Something should be done to make the railroad crossing both fool and daredevil proof!

We are paying altogether too high a toll in life and limb for the maintenance of crossings at grade; and now, while the government has full control of the railroad properties, would be a good time to put an effective end to it by abandoning grade-crossings.

Of course, the expense entailed in constructing either an overhead bridge or an underpass at every necessary rail-highway crossing would be considerable; but even at that, it is doubtful if, in the long run, it would measure up to what the crossings at grade cost the public in property losses, medical and funeral expenses, to say nothing of what the railroads pay out annually in damages and attorneys' fees in settling grade-crossing accident cases.

Charleston's Famous Magnolia Gardens Soon in Bloom

Editor Constitution. I have had a good many letters from Atlantans asking when will be the best time to visit the Magnolia gardens.

In order that people from your city may view the azaleas in full bloom, would you kindly advise them in your columns that in my judgment the flowers will be at their best from March 30 to April 7.

On account of the many inquiries I have received from Atlanta citizens, I make this statement thinking that the information may be of use to those who wish to know.

Yours truly,

So young, so full of buoyant life; alluring years beyond,
Bright with promises of glorious heritage fulfilled were his:
Folded upon his country's eyrie rest his eagle wings
Won by dauntless brain and daring heart
That throb and beat no more; and yet—
He lives within the lives of neighbor folk
Enshrined forever young.
Forever young his manly form, his noble face!
A youth forever young!
Forever young!

Different Sources of Income And Laws Governing Same

The Georgia Inheritance Tax Law Is Good in Principle, but Weak in Some of the Salient Features—Laws Governing Taxation of Public Service Corporations Generally Satisfactory—Necessary Changes Will Require Constitutional Amendments.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

In this article I promised to deal with the different subjects of taxation in Georgia; and the weak points in the laws governing the same.

The assessed value of property for taxation, ad valorem, for 1918, was $918,982,478, against $991,661,616 in 1917, showing a shrinkage in the general tax returns in one year of a round seventy-three millions of dollars. As Georgia's main source of revenue is her general property tax, as in every state, this necessary decrease, on a five mills tax, in the gross revenues of around $365,000 from this, her paramount source, does not look encouraging.

The other sources of tax incomes in 1918, as shown by figures in the comptroller's office, show a general increase except the inheritance tax, which should be one of the big items. That is apparently going back, although young in operation and extremely important; the defects in the law I shall subsequently point out. The estimated inheritance tax for 1918 was $250,000. The receipts from this source were in reality only $191,335.99.

Georgia's total receipts from all sources, including police fees, in the various branches of government, particularly those turned in by the agricultural department, in 1918, amounted to $7,686,445.10, or only about $85,000 more than in 1917, despite the large increase in 1918 revenues from the occupation tax, from insurance fees and taxes, from oil and fertilizer fees, etc.

All of which illustrates the gradual weakening of the general property tax plan—the ad valorem system per se—as an adequate revenue producer for the state. It also illustrates the inefficiency of the 1913 equalization act as a corrective measure.

I shall discuss the general property tax "system," in vogue in Georgia, as a rank failure. It is, as I have before said, antiquated, inadequate, and iniquitous. It is a relic of the primitive age that has long since been discarded by most of the progressive states of America.

The Inheritance Law Has Weak Points.

I believe it is generally conceded that the inheritance tax law of Georgia is correct in idea but in some respects defective. It is an intricate question to arrive at a just and equitable law governing this subject. It must deal with the collection of taxes whenever property passes by the laws of inheritance or succession, by will or deed, grant or gift, intended to take effect in possession after the death of the grantor or donor; to fix the rate, provide the lien, appraisement, appointment of administrators and enforcement of the tax in instances where no will is probated and no administration is applied for, and so on and so on. It is a great big technical, legal proposition in most cases.

The present law in Georgia is weak in that—

It double taxes all personalty of non-resident decedents.

The tax is not graduated according to the degree of relationship or amount inherited. Such graduation is now universally prescribed.

The exemption is the same for all classes, instead of being graduated according to the degree of relationship. Furthermore, there is not exemption from the tax of gifts to associations which are charitable, religious or educational.

The machinery for the administration of the act is defective in that no provision is made for state supervision of the county officials having charge of the assessment of the tax.

This should be one of the large items in Georgia's taxation system. It should be just to the state; just to those against whom the taxes are imposed. The legislative committee now investigating taxation matters in Georgia with a view of suggesting remedial measures for all weak points, will, it is hoped, deal with the defects in this law. This committee as I understand it is not charged with the bare duty of increasing the revenue to the state, though this is essential; it is charged more particularly with the creation of a system that shall substitute strong timbers for the weak in the entire taxation structure, in the interest of the citizens of Georgia and in the interest of their own state government. This committee is composed of some of the most expert students of taxation in Georgia. They will take the people of Georgia in their closest confidence before any recommendations are made to the assembly. They have called a series of public meetings for April and May, throughout the state for that purpose, and it is this expressed desire on the part of these men who are so liberally and zealously giving their time and talents to this great problem in the interest of justice to all the people, that has led me to discuss the question, and to point out what in my opinion are the weak points in the existing laws in Georgia.

The special legislative committee is composed of the following well-known Georgians:

Hugh M. Dorsey, governor, chairman; Senators H. R. DeJarnette and R. A. Denny; Representatives Seaborn Wright, Zach Arnold and L. R. Akin; Judge Enoch H. Callaway, Dr. J. H. T. McPherson; Dr. Edgar H. Johnson; H. J. Fullbright, tax commissioner, and J. W. LeCraw, secretary.

Some of the Laws That Are Satisfactory.

Getting back to the subjects of taxation—

The present system of levying taxes and fees upon insurance companies seems to be satisfactory.

The general opinion is that the present occupation or business tax is levied on principles that are sound, and furnish a source of revenue generally easily collected.

There are apparently some discriminations in the levying of occupation taxes that are not entirely understandable. The following illustration has been furnished by the state tax commmissioner—

"Georgia cannot, on principle, distinguish between taxing lawyers, doctors, housebuilders, etc., and exempt, for instance, merchants. This last class have an advantage already in the payment of taxes on their stocks of merchandise, in that the law taxes property as owned as of date, January 1, a time at which stocks of merchandise are usually at the lowest value. The committee could, perhaps, work out a system which would prove more valuable by fixing the returns of merchandise based upon the average value during the year, or perhaps levy an occupational tax based upon their earnings."

The question of taxing public service corporations is always a mooted one. There are two systems generally employed. One is the ad valorem tax, as in vogue now in Georgia; the other is a tax an earnings. The Georgia system, with some strengthening and safeguarding, perhaps, seems to be satisfactory.

As to the general merits of the two systems, a special committee from the National Tax association has just made report as follows:

"We do not recommend that either the taxation of gross receipts or the ad valorem taxation of public service corporations as going concerns shall be discontinued wherever these methods are in successful operation."

The committee further says: "Concerning the comparative merits of the tax on gross receipts and ad valorem taxation, it is unnecessary for us to express any opinion. We should probably be disinclined to recommend a change in the tax on gross receipts now levied by such states as Minnesota, California, or Connecticut; and we should be equally disinclined to recommend a change in the ad valorem system now in successful operation in a state like Wisconsin. Diversity of method is not inconsistent with real equality in taxation, and at this point we content ourselves with a mere expression of our approval of the conclusions reached some years ago by the committee appointed by the National Tax association to consider the taxation of public service corporations."

In 1880 railroads in Georgia were assessed at $9,000,000. In 1917 this property was assessed at $167,000,000.

In the years between 1880 and 1917, railroad property was increased in taxable value approximately 1300 per cent.

For tax purposes all other classes of property has increased only 400 per cent.

Better not disturb the foundation of a plan that seems to be working all right!

* * * *

The Question of Amendment Laws.

There is no doubt some interest in the matter of constitutional amendments necessary in changing Georgia's present system of taxation, if such shall be found advantageous by the committee investigating the problem. Judge E. H. Callaway, who has given this phase of the matter particular thought, says:

"Complying with the requirements of the constitution, our courts have uniformly required that all tax legislation should conform to the provisions, namely, that the taxes should be uniform upon the same class of subjects and ad valorem on all property subject to be taxed within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax.

"The uniformity clause has generally been applied to license or business taxes, while the ad valorem clause has usually been applied to property taxation.

"Within the limits of uniformity required upon the same class of subjects legislation levying license or business taxes have rarely been interfered with by the courts save when they were so heavy as to amount to a prohibition. The ad valorem clause has frequently been construed, and where efforts have been made, either by legislation or by tax assessors, to vary the tax on personal and real property such legislation or tax enforcement has been held unconstitutional.

"If the present uniformity in the ad valorem principle of our constitution is to be preserved and only the machinery of our system for levying and collecting taxes is to be changed by the commission, then I am of the opinion that no changes in the constitution will be necessary, and that its provisions are broad enough to cover any practicable system of machinery which may be recommended or adopted.

"The question most frequently raised as to the unconstitutionality of taxing systems is based upon that clause of our constitution which requires due process of law. This requirement is completely met by provisions for notice to the taxpayer and an opportunity to be heard.

"If, on the contrary, the commission proposes to follow the radical change in system which has been adopted in many of the other states of substituting for ad valorem taxation a classification of property for taxation, then it will become necessary for us to change our organic law by a constitutional amendment and incorporate a provision in the constitution for the classifiation of all property for taxation. An amendment incorporating this provision in the constitution would be very simple and could be so worded as to still retain the equality or ad valorem feature on all property of the same class and within the same jurisdiction."

Changes in System To Be Suggested.

In the final article of this series tomorrow I shall show what other states are doing toward a more progresive system of taxation than Georgia has; and wherein the demands of the times call for a complete relegation of the archaic uniform rate system and the substitution of a classification system that will be so just and fair to every person that the incentives for making false returns, or for concealing intangible properties will have been removed.

The question of administration is also, in my judgment, one of equal significance, and I will suggest some administrative measures that I believe will be to Georgia's advantage to adopt.

Knack of Remembering Names and Faces

By CROMWELL BLOWER
Famous Memory Expert

Appearance Outlines.

I want you to make a deliberate practice tomorrow of observing almost every person you meet and quickly sizing up in your mind the outline of his appearance. First put what you might call "top and bottom" on your mental picture of each person, then "sides"—that is his figure—then the general shape or contour of his head and face. Dont' try to go any further at first—satisfy yourself with just learning to pick out a clear foundation for your idea of every person you meet tomorrow. Then in the next lesson we will take up the matter of more minute details.

Sometimes, of course, your first view of people does not enable you to observe their height. When people are sitting, your foundation idea will not be as complete as if you could see their full height and figure, but you can build a good foundation for the face at any rate.

One of the first things you are going to notice tomorrow as you set yourself to building a foundation idea of every person you meet, is how negligent you have been in noting people's height. In analyzing my own natural methods of observing people, as compared with the methods of the young friend who was so forgetful, I found I instinctively—so instinctively that I never before had been aware of it—took a sort of mental appraisal of each person's height. I could always tell how a man whom I had met for just a moment compared in height with someone else I knew, sometimes I could come within an inch of naming his exact height—yet I had not been conscious I was being so exact. But that very exactitude is what helps to make the building of your ideas a matter of such accuracy that the rebuilding of them comes easy.

Now tomorrow, with each person you meet, make your outline idea just as exact in point of height as you can. Compare each one mentally with people you know quite well—fix on someone of about the same height, or estimate how much taller or shorter each person is than someone you know, as near as your judgment permits. I believe it is well to deliberately inquire of some of your friends what their exact height is, and begin to clarify your ideas of height by reducing them to feet and inches. Do the same in the matter of weight. Not that I want to suggest you should always go about mentally estimating people's height and weight, but just to get your habits of observation set, as I might say, force yourself for a time to be inordinately exact about it. Once this mental sizing up process is made a sort of habit with you, you won't have to think about it any more.

CHAPTER III.

Building Up a Complete Idea.

If you have closely followed my directions so far (and I hope you have, for I have proved by experience that this is the proper way to remember), you have grown slightly, at least, accustomed to building what I have called a foundation idea for each person you meet—a sort of outline of each person's height, figure and facial contour. You will become more and more accustomed to it as you continue with these lessons, until it becomes a habit with you.

The next step after forming an outline idea of the person is to give that outline a complexion. Is the person dark or fair? With some people it may be hard to settle on the exact classification—you might be hard put to say whether they should be called dark or fair, yet you should force yourself to come to a decision—not that the classification itself is of a bit of importance, but the effort made to classify will make you take a more vivid impression of the person's complexion. That is what I want you to get accustomed to—never leaving the matter of any detail in a hazy, undecided state in your mind, but to form a definite, clear idea of it.

You will then have impressed on your mind a complete background on which to place all the person's individual features and characteristics. Each feature will mean more to you, each one will belong more definitely to that particular person, and hence give you a much better idea than any of them would if just noted by and for themselves. Later on I am going to show you how this same system can be applied to happenings, scenes, plans, arguments, and so on. It is, I have discovered, the difference between a keen perception of things and a dull perception.

First we must learn to apply it fully to a person's features. You have formed your idea of his complexion and now the feature to be added to your mental picture is his eyes. You want to take note of their size, shape and color, but do not let yourself think of them or look at them by themselves. Place them, mentally, on your outline—look at them and think of them as being part of that outline.

GEORGE EUBANKS WILL SEEK PLACE IN CITY COUNCIL

George T. Eubanks, one of the most prominent young business men in Atlanta, has been induced by his friends and fellow citizens of the eighth ward to become a candidate for council from that ward to succeed Jones H. Ewing.

Mr. Eubanks, as president of the park board, was responsible in a large way for the installation of the first municipal swimming pools, and he brought about the foundation plan for the parks, which has saved Atlanta many thousands of dollars and will eventually bring Atlanta's parks up to a fine standard, if pursued.

Mr. Eubanks served on the board of education also, making many progressive innovations in the Atlanta school system.

Mr. Eubanks is popular in a social way, prominent in business, and is a distinguished Knight of Pythias and a high Mason.

He has lived in Atlanta 36 years and his home has been in the eighth ward 12 years.

Mr. Eubanks has been assured of the support of many friends and admirers.

W. D. Hoffman, also of the eighth ward, who has become one of the most influential members of council, announces his intention of making the race to succeed himself in the next council.

Mr. Hoffman is one of the progressives among the city fathers, standing always for Atlanta's advancement and the welfare of her citizens. He is a member of many of the most important of the council committees, and is a leader among his colleagues.

In business life Mr. Hoffman occupies an important place and he has a large following among the business men of the city. It will take a strong man to defeat him for the seat he now holds.

CHIEF CODY THANKED FOR EFFICIENT WORK

The efficiency and promptness of the Atlanta fire department was lauded yesterday in a statement of thanks to Fire Chief Cody issued by C. A. Morris, 90 West Fifth street. Mr. Morris stated that fire was discovered at his residence Sunday morning, and that within four minutes after an alarm had been turned in, a fire company was on hand to extinguish the flames.

GEORGIA CLOTHIERS WILL ORGANIZE HERE

Plan to Affiliate With National Retail Association. Meeting Called April 2.

Plans for the organization of a state association of clothiers to become affiliated with the National Association of Retail Clothiers were formulated at a meeting Monday morning of the member sof the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association at headquarters in the Connally building.

It was agreed that the association invite all the clothing merchants in the state to Atlanta on April 2 to perfect the state-wide organization. Headquarters will be established at the Piedmont hotel. It was also announced that M. H. Rosenthall, secretary of the Ohio Clothiers' association, who is now in Florida, where he is directing the work of forming an organization in that state, will be present at the meeting on April 2.

Atlantans Present.

The following local members were present at the meeting Monday and will assist in the forming of the state-wide organization: W. W. Orr, L. J. Daniel, L. B. Parks, I. Lipstine, J. Fox, Jack Hayes, M. D. Eiseman and Grover McGehee.

Sam Rothberg, former president of the New Jersey Association of Clothiers, who is now connected with the J. Frohsin company, was present at the meeting and outlined the purpose of the proposed organization. He said in part:

"The purpose of the national association is to safeguard the individual interests of the clothiers of the country. There are now state associations in thirty states, the membership in each organization totaling more than 3,000. The members are protected and informed as to the legislation regarding their business by a committee in Washington.

"Joint committees from the association and one from the wholesalers meet at frequent intervals to discuss matters of common interest to both. At present the committees are attempting to form a standard system of terms and discounts for the clothiers, who state they want net terms.

"The government recognized the association during the war by asking it to appoint a war service committee to work in connection with the war industries board. In this way the clothier's interests were safeguarded during the war.

Collection Department.

"The national association has a collection department, through which persons owing bills are followed from a locality to some distant point. The organization is now doing a great deal of work toward securing proper regulations for the filing and collection of railroad claims.

"The national organization publishes a monthly periodical known as "The Bulletin." Through this magazine, which is furnished to the members free, the activities of the association are made known. A strong fight in opposition to the luxury tax provision in the new revenue bill has been launched by the association.

"No outside interests are represented in the organization, as every member must be a bona fide clothier."

UNION TANK LINE DEFEATS GEORGIA IN HIGHEST COURT

Decrees of the state supreme court upholding the methods of Comptroller General William A. Wright in computing the state ad valorem taxes against the Union Tank line were reversed by the United States supreme court Monday, according to Associated Press dispatches.

The case was taken to the higher court by the tank line following adverse decisions in the Fulton superior court and the state court three years ago.

Comptroller General Wright stated last night that action against the tank line was taken under the act of the legislature in 1909, which provides for the payment of ad valorem taxes by railway lines according to the proportion of their mileage in the state.

The higher court held that the line, having no state franchise, was not subject to a franchise tax, but affirmed the manner of computing other taxes which the Union Tank line alleged were confiscatory. Justices Brandeis, Clark and Pitney dissented in the decision.

LARGE HUN CROP OF IRON CROSSES, WRITES J. R. CRUZE

Germany has manufactured more iron crosses since the signing of the armistice last November 11 than they did during the entire four years of the war, according to a letter to The Constitution from a former Atlantan, James R. Cruze, with the American army of occupation in Germany.

"Souvenirs are very plentiful here now, for these Germans are very shifty," he wrote.

He stated that there are indications of large grain crops for Germany this year, and that other foodstuff probably will be plentiful. He said that all small farms have been cut into tracts, and have, for the most part, been taken over by the imperial government. "Everything is kept in a clean condition," he said, "and it's wonderful how they manage to get along on what they have here."

Mr. Cruze formerly was a Pullman conductor, workin gout of Atlanta.

REPORT ON TAXES READY ON MONDAY

Special Committee Now Considering the Charges That Residence Property Carries the Burden of Taxation in Atlanta.

A special committee, appointed at the last meeting of council to go into the tax assessments of the city in order to determine the truth or the falsity of charges that have been made to the effect that residence property carries the burden of taxes in Atlanta, and that central realty, comprising the big office buildings, hotels, theaters and other business houses, are assessed at figures far below their real value, is preparing a report for the meeting of council on Monday.

Councilman Claude L. Ashley, of the fourth ward, who was named chairman of the special committee, is devoting much time and energy to the investigation of the tax assessments of the city with reference to the above rumors, and he is preparing to place the various kinds of real estate in groups, showing the amount of taxes paid and the amount of taxes assessed, and in view of remarks that have repeatedly been made regarding the share of taxes paid by each kind of real property, the report to be made by Mr. Ashley's committee will make some highly interesting reading matter.

Established Relationship.

Not only will the special committee seek to establish the true relationship of the several kinds of property in Atlanta to each other from a tax paying standpoint, but it will show facts and figures on the amount of the assessments made as against the valuation of properties as derived from either the selling price at last sale, the inclusion of property in sworn lists of assets, and from other means.

The work of the committee will be thorough, and a report will be ready for the Monday afternoon meeting of council.

Mr. Ashley said that the Candler building, for instance, had been reputed to have been turned in and assessed for $200,000, but that as a matter of fact the building carries an assessment of $1,000,000 and pays $12,000 in taxes into the city, ad valorem on the real property alone.

There are several other centrally located office buildings in the city paying taxes on from $250,000 to $500,000, declared Mr. Ashley.

List of Properties.

"I am preparing a list of properties in various portions of the city," said Mr. Ashley, "showing what residence property, theater, hotel, department store and other business property is assessed at. Then on the other hand we are seeking to arrive at figures from sworn statements, court records, and otherwise that will show the real value of the holdings.

"The same process will be carried out with reference to the residence, apartment houses and other property in the city."

Mr. Ashley will call a meeting of the committee, which is composed of himself, Alderman C. R. Garner and Alderman I. F. Syson, for one day during the week, when a report will be made up for council.

Mr. Ashley is confident that his committee will be able to show that there has been much exaggeration regarding the alleged inequality of tax assessments as between central and residence property in Atlanta, and the report of his committee will be full of interest.

MILK COMMITTEE OF WOMAN'S CLUB WILL MEET TODAY

On a call of Mrs. Newton C. Wing, a meeting of the milk committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will be held at 11 o'clock this morning in the assembly room of the Y. W. C. A. in the Arcade building.

At this time Mrs. Wing will impress upon the women the importance of immediate and concerted work in contemplation of the meeting of the ordinance committee Friday afternoon.

Thirty letters have been sent out by Mrs. Wing to members of council asking their support for the milk ordinance that will be placed before the ordinance committee at its next meeting and out of a large number of the members who have replied only one has expressed disapproval of the new measure.

The personnel of the finance, committee, it is believed, stands 3 to 2 in favor of the ordinance that will go before the committee Saturday for approval.

Mrs. Wing gave the names of each member of the ordinance committee to the members of the club, and the ladies will write and ask their friends to write letters to councilmen stating their demand for the new milk ordinance in order to disprove the impression that prevailed among some of the council members to the effect that there was only a limited demand for the new ordinance among the people of the city.

SIDELL TO BE GUEST OF GEORGIA CHEMISTS

Dr. Sidell, of the hygenic laboratory of Washington, D. C., who is also president of the Washington section of the American Chemical society, and author of the new treatise on chemistry known as "The Solubilities of the Inorganic Compounds," will be the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Georgia section of the society in the Chamber of Commerce cafe Wednesday, March 27, at 7 o'clock p. m.

The guest of honor will deliver an address which promises to be one of great interest to the local chemists.

J. S. Broghton, secretary of the Georgia section, urges all members to send in their acceptances to the invitations so that the plates may be arranged. A cordial invitation is extended to the ladies to be present.

HYGIENIC CEILING FIXTURES.

In the era following marble-top tables, parlors and bric-a-brac cabinets with swell fronts, came the hideous pendant clusters of electric lights. Once she had ripped up her perfectly good carpets and put down cold, cheerless hardwood floors, the good housewife never rested till she had installed a handsome cluster of dazzling ceiling pendants for the downstairs rooms and a sort of a pool table dome for the dining room. Then she took a few weeks off and resumed treatment for her nerves. She was happy but sick.

Any lighting fixture hanging from the ceiling in which the source of light is directly visible is a mistake in living rooms or work rooms; it is a mistake anywhere unless it may be in a shop window, to attract the eye from afar.

Instead of three or four separate little lights stuck on a couple of yards of glittering brass or bronzed support, hang from the ceiling one large inverted bowl to conceal the lamp itself and diffuse the light through the room in a fashion more like daylight from a window. This bowl serves both as shade and reflector. It is or should be translucent or opal and white inside and a soft, light tint outside. The white lining reflects much of the light to the ceiling. If the ceiling is of a very light shade, as ceilings everywhere except the photographer's dark room should be, the light will again reflected toward the floor throughout the room, very much the same as daylight coming through the windows. This arrangement gives the pleasantest and least trying light to read or work in, and at the same time it is more economical than the hideous exposed and glaring clusters.

The affectation of dark wood paneling, in imitation of our Elizabethan ancestors who never sat up after dark unless for a drinking bout, and the covering of walls with dark hangings are two popular ways of running up needlessly high lighting bills without getting very satisfactory lighting at that. Light finishes are not only more hygienic (for light discourages microbes), but more cheerful and more economical in the long run.

Dull finishes on tables, desks or other furniture are less exacting for the eyes than highly polished or glassy surfaces, just as a dull finish on paper is preferable to a glossy finish for reading. Glazed paper or reflections fatigue even normal eyes.

POWER COMPANY VALUATION ASKED

Railroad Commission Will Act This Week Upon the City's Request for Report on Assets and Properties.

Action upon the petition from the city of Atlanta asking for a special valuation of the assets and properties of the Georgia Railway and Power company in connection with the company's prayer for increased street car fares in this city, will be taken some time during the present wek by the Georgia railroad commission, which will hold an executive session for that purpose.

The city of Atlanta, through its attorneys, James L. Mayson, city attorney, and his assistants, Samuel Hewlett and W. C. Puckett, and Reuben R. Arnold and Charles E. Cottrell, who have been retained to assist the city's legal staff, filed Monday morning with the state railroad commission a petition asking for a complete and comprehensive inventory of the properties owned by the Georgia Railway and Power company, the corporation that is now asking for an increase in its present rates for hauling passengers within the limits of the city.

This valuation has been insisted upon by Mayor Key ever since he came into the office of chief executive of the city, and he has declared on many occasions that the city authorities, as well as those of the state, and the people at large, should be given information as to the holdings of the company with relation to its income before the question regarding the company's claim for more money upon which to operate is finally settled.

Watered Stock Charged.

Many charges have been made to the effect that the power company is surcharged with watered stock, and that it is in the attempt to carry this burden that the company came to its alleged financial grief. No public official information has been given out with reference to the charge except a general denial on the part of the power company officials. The public is intensely concerned in the question as to the real value of the power company's assets, and should the railroad commission order a valuation of the company's holdings the people will await the result of the inventory with interest.

The petition filed by the attorneys for the city of Atlanta Monday morning prays that the Georgia railroad commission direct a formal and exhaustive inventory of the holdings of the big street railway and power company. It is desired by the officials of the city that experts upon such matters pass upon the present worth of the company's holdings and the power of the physical properties to produce revenue before the commission is asked to pass finally upon the question of granting increased street car fares.

Will Involve Much Expense.

The making of an inventory concerning a property like the Georgia Railway and Power company will involve much time, work and possibly great expense, and it is suggested in the city's petition to have the expenses of the inventory divided between the parties concerned. It is believed the inventory would include the holdings of the street railway company, the Atlanta Gas Light company and the properties of the various interurban lines running into the city, and it would require many weeks to complete the work.

The mayor and city council, through its attorneys, and through the citizens' committee, of which J. L. McCord is chairman, will contest the asked-for increase to a bitter end and every effort will be made to prevent the company from securing the increased car fares.

The Georgia railroad commission, which granted the company's petition for increased gas and electric light and power rates, and although it declined to assume authority in the car fare petition, because of a contract between the city and the power company, providing for 5-cent fares, the commission recommended that the increase be allowed the increase to 6 cents for fares.

Must Make Strong Showing.

It is therefore believed that unless a very strong showing is made against the increase the railroad commission will grant the prayer of the street railroad for a 6 or 7-cent fare. Bitter opposition, however, will be kept up against the granting of the increased fares on the part of council and the people's committee, it is believed, and should all legal opposition fail, it has been predicted that the people will take the matter into their own hands, refusing to pay the added fare.

On the other hand, it is declared that many members of council as well as citizens, are favorable to allowing the increase if the valuation of the company's property and the producing powner of the system is shown to warrant the requests that have been made for more revenue. The case has been long and bitterly fought and the people will welcome a settlement of the matter, which will come possibly after the railroad commission acts.

WOMAN IS ARRESTED IN BURGLARY CASE

Columbus, Ga., March 24.—(Special.)—Mrs. J. C. Moore, of 2948 Twelth avenue, is in the police station and two Liberty Bonds identified as part of the $30,000 war securities stolen Sunday night, March 16, when burglars entered the business place of R. P. Strickland & Co., at Concord, and blew open a safe, have been located at a local brokerage establishment, where Mrs. Moore admits having sold them, following the efforts of Chief Moore, of the city police, who has been working on the case since notices of the big burglary were sent out by the company and Pike county officials.

A reward of $1,000 has been offered by the Stricklands for the arrest of the burglars and return of the bonds. Twenty-eight thousand four hundred and fifty dollars of Liberty Bonds, $2,000 in war savings stamps and $400 in cash were stolen.

MRS. AIKEN BETTER MASSEY VERY LOW

Physicians Hold Out No Hope for Recovery of Man Who Shot Decatur Widow.

With two bullet wounds in her head and her left eye torn out, Mrs. George Aiken, a widow, of Decatur, who Sunday afternoon was shot by L. S. Massey, 44 years old, an alleged affinity, who afterward shot himself through the temple, regained consciousness Monday at the Grady hospital and was well enough to make a brief statement of the affair. She declared that Massey, who is a married man, had made several threats to kill her, stating that "he would get her before next Tuesday."

Massey's condition early Monday night was critical, physicians asserting that he would probably not recover. Although Mrs. Aiken was somewhat improved and her injuries are of a serious nature, physicians have expressed hope for her recovery, stating that if further complications do not set in she has a good chance to get well.

"Thought He Owned Me."

"Massey thought he owned me, but he didn't," said Mrs. Aiken. "Last Saturday night he told me that he would get me before Tuesday. He followed me Saturday night, and boarded the same car I did Sunday afternoon on the way to Camp Jessup.

"When I got off the car he got off and followed me, and a short time later called me aside. He said, 'I am going to kill you, but I hate to do it in front of your son.' Before I could realize what he was doing, he drew his gun and fired at me and turned the gun to his head and pulled the trigger. When he fell on the ground, he made an effort to raise himself up and shoot me again.

"Massey shot me because he was crazed with jealousy. He has threatened my life many times, and has objected to my going with any one ever since the death of my husband. I met Massey about two years ago through my husband, who introduced us.

"He continually forced his attentions on me. He would not listen to me when I told him that he was a married man and should leave me alone."

Massey Sinking.

Owing to Massey's gradually sinking condition, he was unable to make any additional statement Monday. He lived with his wife and two children at Faith's crossing in South Kirkwood. He was 44 years old, and up until a month ago was employed by the street car company. He has two children, Mary Lou, 16 years old, and Herman, 9 years old. For the last several weeks he has been employed as a collector for the Georgia Investment company, 16½ East Hunter street.

Since her husband's death Mrs. Aiken has worked in the city. She has two children, Henry, 12 years old, and George, Jr., 7 years old, who was present when his mother was shot. She lived at 65 Adair street, Decatur.

A search has been made by the local police for the weapon which Massey used, but so far they have been unable to find it. According to several witnesses the gun was placed in the ambulance with Massey.

Although Massey is in a critical condition, he is still being watched by the police, who have made a case against him. A blanket charge of disorderly conduct has been docketed against him at the station house.

FORRESTER FACES CHARGES TONIGHT

C. F. Jackson to Attack Head of Brotherhood Before the Stone Mountain Lodge—McGhee Succeeds Jackson, Says Report.

When Stone Mountain lodge of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks meets Tuesday night at the Wigwam, C. F. Jackson, the deposed regional deputy of the union, will personally prefer charges against J. J. Forrester, national president, whom Jackson charges "double-crossed" the local clerks when he declared that Jackson's calling of the local strike was illegal.

Mr. Jackson will return to Atlanta from Nashville, Tenn., early Tuesday morning to personally lead the fight against Forrester. In addition to the local fight against the chief executive of the union, similiar action is threatened from roads throughout the country who declare that they will follow the course of the local clerks.

According to a report prevalent in labor circles last night, E. M. McGhee, head of the local railway clerks' brotherhood, will succeed C. F. Jackson as regional deputy of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. Although no official confirmation could be had of this, it was reported that telegrams sent to Jackson were being turned over to McGhee and other matters of import pertaining to the clerks was being handled by McGhee in lieu of Jackson.

Monday saw almost every clerk back on the job. A few decided that this was a good time to take a vacation and did not return as directed by Mr. Forrester.

It is freely predicted that the action of Mr. Forrester in ousting Jackson and bringing a quick ending to the local strike was but a temporary victory for Forrester. The men want an investigation made as to the sudden actions of Mr. Forrester, whom the clerks claim changed his attitude on the local situation after he conferred with railroad administration officials in Washington.

Beauty Chorus Will Delight the Patrons Of the Roof Garden

From 9:45 o'clock last night, when magnetic Laura Pollette pranced her way on the dance floor to the tune of "It's Too Late Now," until pretty Helen Lewis and a beauty chorus, at midnight, sang the newest of New York cabaret hits, "You Can't Do That Shimmy Here," the second week of the Ansley roof garden, with its Roof Revue, was as merry an occasion as anyone could wish.

Manager C. A. Creighton introduced a brand-new bevy of girls for the second week of the Ansley Roof Revue, and a tremendous crowd of prominent Atlantans gave them nothing less than an ovation.

One of the bright particular stars was Miss Lewis, whose "shimmy" number was one of the big hits of the evening. Florence Drake received an ovation with her number, "They Want It Again," and Edith Osborne was compelled to do an encore to her song, "Mamma's Baby."

Between numbers there was general dancing by the numerous patrons of the roof garden. The new Revue will be at the Ansley roof garden all week.

Jesup, it is said, was standing on a truck unloading express packages from a car, when the train started off suddenly, causing him to lose his balance and fall on the concrete platform.

A coroner's jury that was impanelled soon after the body was found rendered a verdict that he met death by his own hand.

HE FEARED SOMETHING WOULD HAPPEN

Deputy Sheriff of Fulton County, Georgia, Relieved of Dreadful Nervous Trouble, He Says, After Taking Mozley's Lemon Elixir.

One of the best known men in Fulton county, Ga., is J. H. Estes, deputy sheriff. "Years ago," he says, "when I lived in Rex, Ga., I was taken sick and had the physicians around there prescribe for me, but could not get any relief. I went on nearly six months, all the time in mortal fear of something dreadful happening, and had about decided that there was no hope for me and that I would keep on getting worse and soon die. The doctors thought the trouble was with my heart, as I suffered pain around my heart. One day I was telling a friend of my condition. I said he had been in the same fix and went to Dr. Mozley. 'He prescribed Lemon Elixir and after taking several bottles they cured me.' So I got a bottle of Mozley's Lemon Elixir and when I had taken one bottle I realized I was on the right track and continued the treatment until I was perfectly well. For years I kept Lemon Elixir in my home, for use of my family and took it myself every spring and fall, when my liver needed toning up, my trouble being my liver and not my heart. Whereas, I suffered with severe headaches before, since that time I have scarcely had a headache at all." Mozley's Lemon Elixir has been a reliable liver regulating family remedy for forty-seven years and will relieve constipation, sick headache, fevers, colds in the head, grippe, "flu," and other ailments of the stomach and liver. Keep it in the home and use it as a preventive of serious illness. A spoonful or two occasionally will keep your liver active. Trial size bottle, 65c; family size, $1.25. Refuse substitutes.—(adv.)

RUSSELLITES WILL GET LIBERTY TODAY

United Deputy Marshal Parry, and C. A. Wise, vice president of the International Bible School association, reached Atlanta at 1 o'clock yesterday from New York, and will, this morning at 10 o'clock, go to the federal penitentiary and deliver to Warden Zerbst the papers that will set free James E. Rutherford, Grovalni De Cacca, William E. Van Auburgh, Robert J. Martini, Fred Robinson, George H. Fisher, Clayton Woodworth and Hugh McMillan, followers of Pastor Russell, who were sentenced to long terms in the federal penitentiary for alleged violation of the espionage act.

The entire party, including the wives of the men who have been in Atlanta since the prisoners were transferred here from New York, will leave tomorrow at 1 o'clock for New York.

A telegram received by Rutherford Friday night stated that the order had been signed by the federal court Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It was expected that the parties bringing the order for release would reach Atlanta Sunday, and that the prisoners would be released Monday, but the deputy did not reach Atlanta until 1 o'clock Monday. He went to the Piedmont hotel and did not go to the penitentiary during the afternoon.

A large party of friends will be present this morning when the iron gates of the prison swing open and the seven men step out into the sunlight of freedom.

Big "Tanks" in City For Parade in Honor Of Returning Heroes

It is probable that when the 17th engineers and the Emory units reach Atlanta, part of the big parade which is planned in their honor will consist of half a dozen big "tanks." These great armored tractors, which drove such terror into the hearts of the Huns, arrived in the city on Monday.

They are to be used during the coming Victory Loan campaign, and will go out over the entire Sixth federal reserve district. But before they go, the Victory Loan officials have offered the use of them to the city of Atlanta to form part of the great March of Triumph which will take place when the boys come home. For the 17th engineers, the Emory unit and for the 82d division as well, when that bunch of heroes gets here, the tanks are to be used, if the committee on reception arrangements so desired.

In offering the tanks, the Victory Loan officials only make one stipulation. That is, that not more than one tank is to be allowed on Peachtree viaduct at a time. The tanks are heavy, and, while one is safe enough, two or three at a time on Atlanta bridges might result in disaster.

Where The Girl With the Smile Wins

NOT Just the Girl with the smile that lightens her face, though that, too, is an important business asset—but the girl with the smile that lightens her voice when she sends it out over the telephone wires and that leaves a pleasing impression with the person at the other end of the line!

To such young women of from 16 to 25, who display willingness and possess the necessary qualifications, telephone operating offers big opportunity for advancement.

It offers good pay at the start when the accepted applicant enters the Operators' Training Department for instruction. It offers increased pay as soon as she completes the training period and is assigned to a central office as near her home as the requirements of business permit. And from that time on, it offers advances in pay at frequent intervals and opportunities for promotion to many important supervisory positions.

There are other features of telephone operating that you will want to know about, too—the rest rooms where the operators spend their rest periods, the dining rooms where they may bring their lunches or, as in the larger central offices, purchase one at cost, and the Plan for Sickness, Disability Benefits and Insurance.

Why not call on Miss Prince, Room 308, 25 Auburn Avenue, between 8:30 a. m. and 5:00 p. m. and obtain full particulars?

MOTHER AND SON HELD AT TOWER FOR VAGRANCY

Occupying cells at the Tower are a mother and her son, Mrs. Mollie Sumner and Roy Sumner, both bound over on a vagrancy charge by the recorded Monday afternoon.

The police state that the mother and son are victims of the "dope" habit and that they have given the police much trouble in the past. The boy, they claim, will not toil and adopts all kinds of subterfuges to raise the necessary coin to get his desired drug.

His latest effort to obtain money, according to the police reports, was the pickpocket act, but his intended victim was a bit too quick for Roy and grabbed the hand that was engaged in taking his pocketbook from his pocket. A policeman was summoned and this disciple of Fagin taken to police station, where he later met his mother, both being held on vagrancy charges.

The defendant denied all knowledge of the pocket-picking charge when arraigned before the judge Monday afternoon.

PRETTY ACTRESS DIVORCES HUBBY; CHARGES CRUELTY

The first verdict in a suit for divorce instituted against her husband, Frederick Roberts, by Mrs. Edwina C. Roberts, playing with the "Have a Heart" company, now playing here, was awarded the plaintiff Monday before Judge John Pendleton. The final verdict will be awarded at the July term of court.

Mrs. Roberts charged cruelty and neglect in her action for separation, alleging that her husband, an actor in New York, on one occasion choked her and would often desert her and her little daughter for weeks at a time.

The calendar of divorce suits had been prepared for Judge W. D. Ellis, but on account of the fact that he was busy hearing a damage suit for $30,000 filed against Robert Adair by D. H. Jones, Judge Ellis took his place on the bench. About forty cases were disposed of during the session, the plaintiffs in twenty-six of them being granted first verdicts.

Wounded Three Times On Different Fronts, Atlanta Boy Returns

After being wounded three times on three different fighting fronts, Nathan Schwartzberg, of Atlanta, has returned home, preceding his outfit, the 151st machine gun battalion.

This Georgia outfit, says Schwartzberg, fought like a whirlwind in France and performed as many deeds of valor as any machine gun battalion at the front. Schwartzberg says he will never forget France and the Y. M. C. A. celebration last Christmas. He says the "Y" men were a fine lot.

Schwartzberg was wounded first at Chateau Thierry, again as St. Mihiel and for the third and last time at the Argonne. Which was enough to end his fighting days for the time being, at least.

This wounded veteran is a steamfitter and a plumber and is going back to his old trade. He says steam-fitting will be rather tame compared with battling in the Argonne, but that it's just about as exciting as anything he knows of just now.

Alleged Jewelry Thief Who Made Escape Here Found in Philadelphia

John Harris, 29 years old, an alleged jewelry thief and second-story man, who perfected a mysterious escape from the Fulton county Tower on the night of February 26, has been arrested by the police in Philadelphia, Pa., according to a wire received early Monday by Sheriff Lowery.

Harris was arrested Sunday and positively identified by the Philadelphia police from a circular sent them by Sheriff Lowery that contained his photograph and Bertillon measurements, which were made by bureau of identification.

Harris was arrested in Atlanta after, it is alleged, he had robbed guests at the Imperial hotel. He is charged with stealing several hundred dollars worth of clothing and jewelry from Mrs. J. H. Oppenheim, of the Imperial hotel, and city detectives state that they have evidence that he entered several rooms at the local Y. M. C. A. on Luckie street.

FATHER IS ANXIOUS TO FIND ALVIN ORR

Alvin Orr, 12-year-old son of Charles A. Orr, of 48 Center street, has been missing since last Friday and the worried father is anxious about the lad's whereabouts. He asks that anyone having information about the boy who, it is thought, has run away, communicate with him at once.

Young Orr has light hair and blue eyes and has the habit of half closing the left eye. When he left home he was wearing a blue serge suit, a light-colored blouse and black shoes and stockings.

NUXATED IRON

You Can Tell the Women with Plenty of Iron in their Blood—Beautiful Healthy Rosy Cheeked Women Full of Life, Vim and Vitality.

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says physicians should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—Iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and in some cases thereby do more harm than good, advises use of only nuxated iron, taken three times per day after meals. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances. Dispensed by all good druggists.

What the Doctor Says about Twin Beds

IT is no new thought with you, of course—the idea of a separate bed for each member of the family.

This has been the custom with thousands of families for years—a rapidly spreading custom ever since Twin Beds put the separate bed at the service of households where space is limited.

IT is a thing, too, that doctors have long been urging. Not only for the warding off of infections, such as coughs, "sore throat" or grippe, but for the sake of perfect relaxation and sound sleep.

The restlessness of one sleeper does not disturb the other. And there isn't any loss of vitality—as there is when children sleep with old people, or invalids with the healthy.

But even in a separate bed you will never sleep sound unless your bed invites perfect relaxation.

There is not a person anywhere but will sleep better for doing away with the creaky wooden bed or loose-jointed noisy metal bed and getting a Simmons Metal Bed instead — with Slumber King Spring.

The Simmons Bed is noiseless. It locks firm at the corners The corner locks are made of pressed steel—have much longer bearing surfaces than the average — fit true and snug — not a creak, rattle, or feeling of unsteadiness.

It is perfectly rigid — feels and moves like one solid piece.

The Simmons Pressed Steel Corner Locks are protected by basic patents. They are the most fundamental inventions of modern bed manufacturing—exclusive with Simmons, not to be duplicated or imitated.

And these patented corner locks have made possible the Three-piece Bed —the new Simmons idea—the spring forming a single unit with the side rails.

THE Slumber King Spring really does what you have always wanted a spring to do.

It is a new and advanced idea. It is a system of elastic steel strips with spirals of high test spring wire—so combined that the spring action is equal in all directions.

The Slumber King Spring yields to the weight of the body, but supports it. It fits square on the bed. It does not sag, hump — or lose its resiliency. It is always a firm, elastic foundation for the mattress. It invites sound, health-giving sleep.

The Slumber King Spring is finished in oxidized silver. It is rust-proof. It has no loose ends or rough corners — cannot wear or tear the ticking.

THOUSANDS, who for years have been "light sleepers"—waking at every sound—relax completely and sleep all night on a Simmons Metal Bed.

If you've been thinking of separate beds you may be glad to know that Simmons Company are specialists in Twin Beds.

You'll find Simmons Metal Beds and Slumber King Springs at your leading dealer's.

An unusual assortment in brass, colored enamel and natural wood effects—to harmonize with the interior decorations of the day.

If you do not know the Simmons merchants in this section, we shall be glad to send you their names.

BUSINESS STATUS IN SIXTH DISTRICT

Attitude of "Watchful Waiting" Prevails in Most Lines—Little Progress Made Towards Normal Conditions.

By Jos. A. McCord, Federal Reserve Agent.

While reports from many sections of the district indicate that trade, both wholesale and retail, continues fairly active, the question of prices is still a disturbing element, and the attitude of "watchful waiting" prevails in almost all lines of business. No great progress has been made during the past few weeks toward a return to normal conditions. Wholesale and retail merchats are not disposed to make extensive purchases and are buying only to meet immediate requirements. Indications are that this condition will continue until merchants are satisfied that prices have become more stabilized.

Bank conditions throughout the district are reported satisfactory. In some instances deposits have increased, but in a large number of cases deposits have slightly decreased, due principally to large payments having been made to states and counties and to the United States government for taxes. Demand for money shows an increase and callections are fairly satisfactory, cosidering the fact that much cotton is still in the hands of the producers and a large amount of cotton paper is being carried and renewed from time to time.

Bank clearings for the month of February are smaller in every instance reported than for the preceding month.

Excessive rains over the southeastern states during the past two weeks have caused considerable damage to the early vegetable crops, especially in Florida, and all over the district this has caused a delay in preparing ground for spring planting.

Since last report the market on Florida oranges and grepefruit has continued strong at high prices. Early bloom oranges are about all shipped and there is only a limited amount of the latter varieties to go forward in the next two or three weeks. The supply of grapefruit to move during the next two weeks is lighter than was anticipated, owing to high prices that have prevailed resulting in regular shipments throughout the season. The market on celery continued strong until about a week ago at $4.00. Since that time prices have taken a sudden drop to from $3.00 to $3.50. The Florida cabbage market has strengthened and advanced and at the present time satisfactory and profitable prices are ruling.

It is estimated that the potato crop is damaged to the extent of from 25 per cent to 50 per cent by the recent rains. The prospects for an excellent tomato crop were good until the rains set in, damaging it to an extent estimated at 50 per cent to 60 per cent.

Cotton Being Held.

Cotton is still being held in large quantities, and the movement to hold off the market as much as possible of the cotton still in the hands of the producers has gained strength during the past few weeks. The acreage planted to cotton the coming season will be appreciably less than last year.

Continued effort is being made to have the embargo on shipments of cotton to the central European powers lifted, as the certain foreign demand would without doubt cause the price of the staple to rise to a satisfactory figure. If this were done, trade in all lines in the district would be greatly stimulated.

The production of lumber is still limited, on account of weather and labor conditions, present output being probably not in excess of 70 per cent of normal. Shipments are practically equal to present output, and stocks are, therefore, not increasing. It will probably require sixty days to accumulate a fair assortment of lumber at southern pine mills. The retailers report large sales, due to increased demand caused by building operations and repair work.

During the past month a substantial increase is shown in the erection of new buildings at many points throughout the district. While building materials are high, a scarcity of homes is felt, and many houses are now in process of erection. Should building materials decline, a great increase in building activities would follow.

Naval stores operations have not yet become active, and from indications it will not be over 15 to 20 per cent in excess of last year's output, which means from 25 to 30 per cent below normal production.

Mining Shut Down.

Quite a number of small coal mines have shut down on account of the lack of orders, and due also to the high cost of labor. The output for February, 1919, although two large coal producing companies failed to report, shows total tons mined 1,150,921, against 1,430,225 tons mined in January. One cause for this reduction in tonnage is the fact that February is a short month. It is also reported that the negro miner, who is receiving very high wages, only works from three to four days each week.

Cotton mills and pipe plants are not active. Their operations are injured by lack of orders and from unsettled conditions prevailing over the district.

Although pig iron furnaces were not fully in operation, the output of pig iron was greater in February, compared with January, by over 11,000 tons. This increase is largely due to the elimination of inexperienced labor, as many of those working in this line before the war have returned. An increased tonnage per man has resulted, which materially reduces the cost of production. The present demand for pig iron is light.

The steel plants are busy and have enough orders booked to keep them at full speed for many months. The shipbuilding plants in the south will need large quantities of steel, and the steel fabricating plants, when completed, will use a large steel tonnage. The unfilled steel tonnage of the United States Steel corporation is reported at 6,010,787 tons, as against 6,684,268 on January 31, a reduction of 673,481 tons. Trade conditions both in iron and steel are not up to the standard, as far as demand is concerned, but hope is entertained that both commodities will soon be stabilized, and a greater demand result.

Labor conditions have improved to some extent in this industry, both as to quantity and in efficiency.

It is felt all over the district that as soon as cotton begins to move at a satisfactory price trade in all lines will revive, collections improve and bank deposits show material increases. While the expected downward trend of prices has not materialized, it is encouraging to note reductions in prices of a few standard articles of food during the month.

FOR "HERO" STORY AVIATOR IS TRIED

Washington. He said the British air ministry began to doubt the truth of the exploits, and investigated the matter last fall.

British Airmen to Testify.

Mr. Harper tried to prove by Commander Edwards that a letter had been received at naval headquarters here saying that Chamberlain flew with the British squadron from June 20 to July 13 of last year. But Edwards did not remember such a letter.

It is understood that several members of the 208th royal air squadron are returning to London Thursday and the defense expects to call some of them in an attempt to prove that Captain Chamberlain was attached to that squadron during the time mentioned by Mr. Harper today.

The only other witness was Captain F. T. Evans, in command of the Poliac air station, who said that when the house naval affairs committee was at Poliac Captain H. I. Cone, commanding United States naval aviation in France, instructed Captain Evans to get Chamberlain's then untold stroy. Captain Evans said that Chamberlain was reluctant to give a comprehensive verbal report, whereupon he asked him to write a report. He submitted a report virtually the same as that which has been published.

Captain Evans gave Chamberlain high praise as an aviator. More than forty witnesses have been summoned to testify, but the number is likely to be extended. It may be necessary to hold a session in France.

Chamberlain's Amazing Story.

Captain Chamberlain was reported to have borrowed an airplane from a British airdrome in July, 1918, and in a battle with twelve German machines to have brought down five and damaged two others. He was said to have taken a German prisoner, and while retaining this man, carried a wounded French officer back to the British lines under a heavy fire. According to a London dispatch August 31, last, Chamberlain had been recommended for the Victoria cross and the congressional medal of honor on the basis of the accounts of his exploits.

In February of this year, the accuracy of the reports of the exploit having been called into question, the American naval authorities in London began an investigation, which now has been followed by the court-martial proceedings.

Closed barely steady.

New York, March 24.—Apprehension that the unsettled conditions reported in Hungary may delay peace negotiations or retard the development of foreign trade were considered chiefly responsible for heavy liquidation and a severe break in the cotton market here today. New style May contracts broke to 23.90 and October to 19.95 and the close was easy at a net loss of 82 to 118 points in the new style months and of 93 to 135 points on the old style deliveries.

The market opened steady at a decline of 4 to 12 points on new and of 4 to 50 point on the old style months. Old style March was relatively weak under a little scattering liquidation, but trading in that delivery ended at midday without developing any special activity or feature. Offerings were not badly absorbed during the early session, but Liverpool was a considerable seller here, while there was scattered selling for southern account and the market became weaker toward the middle of the day.

The unfavorable news from Europe seemed to create a fear among recent buyers that there had been over-optimism with respect to an early announcement of peace and the reopening of central European outlets, and there was also selling on more favorable weather for crop preparations in the south. Houses with Wall street connections were particularly active on the selling side, while there was very little support on the break which carried prices to the lowest levels touched since early in the month. October contracts at 19.95 showed a decline of 225 points from the high level of last week while old crop months showed losses of 130 to 185 points from recent high figures.

Reports of steady southern spot markets held moderate rallies during the middle of the day, but even slight bulges met increased offerings from old longs.

Spot cotton quiet; middling 27.65.

N. O. MARKET IS LOWER FROM OPENING TO CLOSE

New Orleans, March 24.—It was a lower market in cotton today from the opening to the close. Late in the session, after the quoting of spots at unchanged prices, there was a steadier feeling for a while, with a recovery of nearly $2 a bale, but heavy liquidation was felt right on the close, coming from longs who wanted to even up over the holiday tomorrow, and the result was that last prices were at the lowest of the day, showing net declines of 60 to 86 points on the old contracts and 65 to 113 points on the new. New May fell off to 23.55 and new October to 19.54.

The opening was at the decline and losses were steadily widened as the session grew older, the main selling features being the foreign exchange situation and the fresh complications in European politics. Weather conditions were also considered much more favorable and this opinion made October the weakest month. The threat of rain for the western belt did not have any influence on the market and anther bullish feature of the session, the cabled report from Liverpool that the labor situation had a better look, also fell flat.

Spots were quoted unchanged at 27 cents for middling, but business appeared to be restricted to some extent by the weakness of foreign exchange.

Spot cotton quiet and unchanged; sales on the spot 476 bales; to arrive 2,800; low middling 21.00; middling 27.00; good middling 28.00. Receipts 3,275; stock 419,454.

Fair Exchange.

(From The Boston Transcript.)

Certainly everybody will be in favor of an extra session of congress if it will promise to do something extra in the matter of passing laws.

A cablegram from Tokio, Japan, dated March 3, states that a government bill which proposes to permit Chinese labor to enter Japan and also to grant the privilege of mining and property rights to foreigners has been introduced into the parliament.

For many years farmers of western Canada have been great importers of pure-bred stock to bring their flocks and herds up to the highest standard and are only making a start as exporters.

MARKET SLOWS UP ON FOREIGN NEWS

Events in Central Europe Impelled Moderate Trading — Favorable Change in Market for Metals Unexpected Development.

New York, March 24.—The uneven and hesitant course which marked today's comparatively dull stock market was attributed not so much to the impending recess as to the disquieting tenor of the foreign news.

Intimations that events in central Europe might necessitate radical changes in the military policy of the peace conference impelled moderate selling in the early and later stages of the session.

An unexpected development was the favorable cnauge in the market for metals. Reports of a broad inquiry for refined copper, the first since the series of drastic cuts in that commodity, lifted that group 1 to 2½ points, but much of this advantage was cancelled on publication of the reduced Anaconda dividend.

Sugars, several of the oils, notably Sinclair and Royal Dutch, American International, Wilson Packing and sundry miscellaneous issues gave a semblance of strength at intervals, but equipments, motors and high-grade petroleums were reactionary.

United States Steel and related shares lost 1 to 3 points, equipments 1 to 2, motors 1 to almost 4, and shippings 1 to 2, the latter reaction more than any other division in the broader offerings of the final hour.

Rails showed all of their recent sluggishness, several of the leaders remaining unquoted and utilities, including tractions, were again handicapped by the local transportation situation.

Nominal dealings in foreign exchange, especially lires [illegible]flected further erratic tendencies. [illegible]ll money ruled at 5½ per cent and time funds eased, but few loans were reported.

Liberty bonds shaded slightly, foreign issues were fractionally lower and the general list was heavy. Total sales, par value, $12,300,000.

Old United States bonds unchanged.

Markets Closed Today.

On account of the parade of the 27th (New York national guard) division in New York today and the big demonstration of welcome to be given the soldiers of the metropolis on their return from the fighting front, all the larger markets, except the Chicago board of trade, will be closed. The New York stock, cotton, coffee and sugar exchanges voted several days ago to close today. The produce exchange took the same action yesterday. Under a mutual agreement the New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges have agreed to observe the same holidays. So the New Orleans exchange will be closed today also.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, March 24.—(Special.)—The opening market showed considerable indication of strength, as it apparently was not influenced by the unfavorable foreign political developments over the week-end. Shortly after the opening liquidation set in and continued practically all day, there being a disposition on the part of holders to liquidate over the holiday, especially so on account of the uncertain foreign situation. Temporarily foreign news will be the market guide and unless the situation clears within the next day or two we expect prices to work temporarily lower, although we much prefer to purchase on all weakness with the idea of holding for ultimately much higher prices.

JOHNSTON BROS.

New York, March 24.—(Special.)—The political news from abroad was very discouraging and on the eve of a holiday it seemed that traders were anxious to liquidate their long contracts. The realizing from this source was heavy and resulted in a decline of approximately 100 points from Saturday's closing. We are of the judgment that politically conditions abroad will right themselves in the near future and look for the peace treaty to be signed within several weeks. Immediately following we believe that exports will show improvement.

J. W. JAY & CO.

New York, March 24.—(Special.)—The feature of the market today was the liquidation of several large traders who are usually identified with the stock market. They have been large buyers of cotton on the recent advance, basing their purchases on the expectation of a demand from the central empires, and they are believed to have been influenced to liquidate by the political news from Hungary published this morning. Near positions have been relatively much stronger, as shippers' brokers have bought on the way down. There is as yet no indication of any cotton coming here for delivery on the new contract.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

POUND STERLING DOWN ON LONDON BOURSE

London, March 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—The pound sterling was worth only $4.62 at the close of trading today on the stock exchange. This was the best offer traders wishing to remit funds to New York could get. Earlier in the day business cable transfers were done at a few cents higher, but the rate seemed more settled at the lower level.

Coffee.

New York, March 24.—After opening unchanged to 5 points higher, the market for coffee futures sold up to 14.40 for July and 13.91 for December, or about 15 to 18 points net higher during the middle of the day on a spurt of covering which seemed to be inspired by an advance in the Santos cables. There was not much buying, however, and most of the advance was lost in the late trading under realizing or scattering liquidation with the close net unchanged to 4 points higher. May, 14.90; July, 14.29; September, 14.02; October, 13.96; December, 13.76; January, 13.76; March, 13.76.

Spot dull. Rio 7s, 16¼; Santos 4s, 21¼. Cost and freight offers were a shade higher on the average, with 4s ranging from 19.50 to 20.00. Dry Goods.

New York, March 24.—Cotton goods markets were quieter. Percales have been revised 2 cents a yard. New shirtings lines for spring will be shown this week. Yarn markets were steadier, with demand showing a slight improvement. An auction sale of 40,000 bales of carpets will take place April 1. Dress goods were quiet, but selling agents expect to make new offerings shortly, following the settlement of strikes in mill centers.

EXPORT BUYERS LIFT CORN VALUES

Closing Prices, However, Were Unsettled Owing to Larger Receipts and Fine Weather—Provisions Down.

Chicago, March 24.—Export purchases of corn here, the first that have been made in some time, lifted the market today to new high levels for the season. Closing prices, however, were unsettled at ⅛c net lower to an advance of 2c, with May $1.47 to $1.47⅛ and July $1.37¾ to $1.37⅞. Oats gained ¼ to ⅝c. The result in provisions was a setback of 15 to 37 cents.

At first the corn market showed considerable weakness owing to larger receipts and to fine weather that promised to make the movement continue more liberal than has been the rule of late. Another bearish factor was a current report that the government was to let go of much rye and barley. Then word began to circulate that export demand for corn had resulted in actual business here amounting to upward of 150,000 bushels and that additional foreign buying was in prospect. Radical bullish sentiment quickly developed and was given a further stimulus by a decrease of the visible supply total. Near the end of the day, however, an official forecast of cheaper value for foodstuffs led to something of a reaction.

Oats sympathized with the strength of corn.

Weakness in the hog market had a depressing effect on provisions.

"Have a Heart" Is Featured By Pretty Girls and Music

The remarkable part about the performance of "Have a Heart," at the Atlanta theater last night, was the smallness of the audience.

When it is rememberd that this same show was here last year and when the charm of its music, the ability of its cast and the beauty of its feminity are all considered, it is hard to understand why a capacity audience was not present.

But it wasn't, by many seats, although it is doubtful if that fact detracted at all from the enjoyment of those present.

"Have a Heart" contains the most whistleable airs of any attraction that has been here since "Going Up." It is blessed with a delightful cast and also—but that deserves a special paragraph.

All the way through the first act the writer was obsessed with the feeling that there was something unusually attractive about the show. Maybe a natural slowness of perception was to account for the delay in analyzing the cause, but finally it dawned—the bunch of girls who grace the company are exceptionally well selected, from a pulchritudinous standpoint. Indubitably, indubitably!

Joseph Keno, as the elevator boy, is easily the central figure among the comedians. He is very funny and his dancing is, as the gentleman in the next seat remarked, "full of pep."

His partner, Grace Hoey, as Dolly Brabazon, the movie queen, is fully qualified from head to toe for her work, and employs every part of her ability acceptably.

Every member of the cast is fully adequate and there isn't a disappointing moment throughout.

There is one lady, however, who came near stopping the show. She just wouldn't encore, but it wasn't because the audience didn't try. Perhaps if the crowd had been larger she would have succumbed to a large volume of applause, but it couldn't be more sincere. This lady is Rosie Green. She only appears once, but when she does—. She is a dancer and it is impossible to say how long she is on the stage. She dances with Keno, the elevator boy, and she is a whirlwind. Time stopped to watch her antics and when she left the stage it was impossible to know whether she had danced for one minute or ten.

The big song hit is "You Said Something," and there were at least half a dozen encores last night. The ensemble work and lightning effects are exceptionally pretty in this number. Other good numbers are "Look in His Eyes," "Samarkand," "Honeymoon Inn" and "Daisy."

The settings are attractive—lingerie features the first and there is at least one pair of ladies' hose displayed on the counter that it would be pleasant to see well filled. The costumes are fresh and beautiful and the dancing is electric. The orchestra is enlarged by the addition of half a dozen new musicians—the piccolo and flute man attracted a lot of comment—and with every feature considered the show deserves a full house for the two remaining performances this afternoon and night.

And still there remains in the memory, slipping out in irrepressible whistles as this is written, that haunting little tune—

"You said something
When you said you loved me.
Oh, but I wonder for how long it will be.
If some day you find
You've altered your mind
I'll be forgiving—"

RALPH T. JONES.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Lyric.)

You just can't help liking the bill at the Lyric theater this week, for the program of entertainment offers a little of everything, so there is enough to please and to satisfy even the most blase of theatergoers.

For if you like jazz, and who doesn't in these days when liquor is going out of fashion and music is taking its place, for that is what they are predicting will happen after the first of July has made a barren country for the lovers of intoxicants, there is plenty of this kind of amusement to cheer you up.

The feature act for the first half of the week is the "Cabaret de Luxe." This is a jazz offering par excellence, and the way the boys and girls have of presenting the latest dances and music scores a big hit with every audience.

But so well do they do their work, and so far different is their conception of this art, that they are as far above the usual jazz artists as grand opera is above the simpler forms of music.

Then there is the Great Western quartet, widely known as one of vaudeville's greatest singing organizations. Atlanta has always liked music and always been especially fond of quartets, and this one is no exception to the rule.

There is something different for you in "The Suicide Garden," a travesty presented by Paul McCarthy and Elsie Faye. There is another act all will like in the work of Fred Holmes and Lulu Wells in "An Old-Fashioned Bride."

The travel and news pictures are very good.

Loew Vaudeville.

(At the Grand.)

The new bill which is appearing at Loew's Grand during the first of the week contains more acrobatic stunts than has been staged here during the entire season. It seems that the entire troupe of players are fitted up with Herculean muscles and the result is more good dancing and thrilling, daredevil acting is crowded into one performance than is usually found in dozens of bills, and there are enough jokes and music to furnish the necessary variety.

Straight from Tokio comes the Fugui Japs, with their wonderful muscles that brings the unreserved admiration of vaudeville audiences. The scene of their act is a reproduction of the historic temple of Jen Joro Hidori, where fifteen hundred years ago that warrior statesman and architect was warned of death by the black cat on the porch.

Orr and Weimers are acrobats, singers, jokers and dancers and offer a very pleasing contribution to the bill.

Albert and Rogers give a pleasing number with the song, "What Will I Do When the Town Goes Dry?" and they follow it with jokes and riddles, finally ending with a laughable song entitled "Never Trouble Trouble Till Trouble Troubles You."

Nevin and Erwood have a novelty number of comedy that pleases.

The wonderful cats and rats of Swain even carry out the acrobatic idea and two of the cats stage a boxing bout that secures the rapt attention of the audience.

"The Junior Devil," which appears on the screen, is one of the most delightful comedies that filmdom has offered for some time and very few in the audience leave when the vaudeville acts are finished, but remain to laugh at the clever picture offering.

NELL PARIS.

Neil O'Brien's Minstrels.

(At Atlanta Tomorrow.)

The Neil O'Brien Great American Minstrels come to the Atlanta for one day only, tomorrow (Wednesday), for two performances, matinee and night. Of the members of the company, Neil O'Brien, "Sugarfoot" Gaffney and Vaughn Comfort are names which signify the constructional elements necessary to produce a first-class minstrel performance—comedy, dancing and singing. But these three individuals are not the entire show by any means. There are forty other clever performers and the program is studded with feature acts and the latest ballads. The dancing numbers include special dancing by Miller and Dixon, eccentric dancing by "Sugarfoot" Gaffney, and acrobatic dancing by Fred Miller.

"The End of the Road."

(Coming to Atlanta.)

Scheduled for appearance at the Atlanta theater for a period of eight days, two performances being given daily, at 2:30 and 8:30, beginning March 27, is the first of the films of the war department Commission on Training Camp Activties, to be presented for public exhibition. It is a dramatic photoplay entitled "The End of the Road," and has been used for more than a year past by the government in the vigorous campaign of education to keep America's fighting forces free from diseases. Now that the war is over the good work is to be carried on by public health films. Claire Adams, in the leading feminine role, does a most realistic piece of acting. Opposite her is Richard Bennet, who plays the role of a prominent army surgeon. Seats for the first three days of the engagement go on sale today.

Big Griffith Film.

(At the Vaudette.)

The lure of Griffith, the magic of his name, the universal appeal his pictures have for the masses, was well proven yesterday when "The Romance of Happy Valley" opened a two days' run at the Vaudette theater, accompanied by a Mack Sennett cemody, "Never Too Old." Griffith has gotten away from the war theme and has gone back to the simple life, the life of the men and the wamen of this country before war was even thought of. He has shown how a young boy left his home in order to make his fortune in the city, then he shows his hard fight for the fortune he sought and finally his success and his return to the girl he "left behind."

Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin.

(At the Tudor.)

The Tudor's new picture program, with the two Chaplins as the stars, got away to a flying start at the house on Monday and it is expected that both films will draw lots of business during the first three days of this week. Charlie Chaplin appears in "A Fair Exchange," which is one of the funniest things the comedian has ever done, while Mrs. Charlie Chaplin has a brand-new, fresh-from-the-studio release entitled "When a Girl Loves." It can be unqualifiedly stated that Mrs. Chaplin's "When a Girl Loves" is a western play that is "different." This is saying a great deal in its favor.

GRIFFITH AT HIS BEST.

"Girl Who Stayed Home" a Fine Picture.

David W. Griffith at his best—that about describes "The Girl Who Stayed Home," which opened to large crowds at the Rialto theater yesterday for a week's run. As another proof of his ability he is introducing in his latest screen success a new supporting cast and one that shows throughout the effects of the Griffith system of making stars. The picture deals with a story on this side of the ocean—the heroines who fought at home, while their lovers and husbands fought across the seas. It will make millions think, it will make millions smile, and they will be the better for seeing this classic of the silent drama.

'THE MIDNIGHT PATROL' IS SENSATIONAL FILM

Thomas H. Ince's special production, "The Midnight Patrol," at the Criterion theater this week, is one of the most sensational stories ever told on the screen, and in the hands of a less accomplished producer might have fallen considerably short of its present mark.

Treating as it does, a phase of police work with which the public is entirely unfamiliar, "The Midnight Patrol" is certain to become popular with the lovers of heroes and heroic deeds. Mr. Ince's principal idea in producing the picture was to give the policeman an opportunity to show the public what he has done and what he can do in the future.

It is a picture replete with sensational moments, filled with genuine thrills, and capped by a wholesome love story. It is a true Ince product from start to finish.

GREAT HIT IS SCORED BY "WIVES OF MEN"

They had just been married the minister had but a few moments before said the words that made them man and wife. He was waiting for his bride to join him so they might start on their honeymoon. Softly she came down the stairs, stole up to her husband, looked over his shoulder and saw—the photograph of another woman with words of love written on it. Then followed twelve years of misery for her. Was she to remain true to her husband and let him do as he pleased or was she to get what pleasure she could out of life? This is the absorbing sort of a plot that is unfolded in "Wives of Men," now at the Strand, starring beautiful and talented Florence Reed.

PEACE CONGRESS DELAY FEEDS BOLSHEVIK FIRE

practically conquered the Ukrainians, the handful of Greek and French troops sent to assist the volunteers without material or without assurances, have been left to escape, while the volunteers made common cause with the Bolshevists. Rumania, the best single bulwark we have in the east, has been paralyzed because of a quarrel between Rumania and Serbia over a tiny morsel of territory, a quarrel which the Paris conference has not been able to compose.

Little Peoples Fighting.

The single effective Ukrainian force is engaged in a campaign to drive the Poles out of Lemberg. The Poles and Czecho-Slovaks, who together should constitute a barrier on the north, are at odds over Teschen and we cannot make up our minds to give the Poles, not allied troops, but Polish troops who have fought in France.

Moreover, the peace conference under the impulsion of Lloyd-George is at this moment engaged in depriving the Poles of any adequate access to the sea, lest there should be German dissatisfaction in the future. Finally the quarrel between the Jugo-Slavs and the Italians continue, and still another of those people who should be our allies in the east against Bolshevism is disintegrating under attacks which the Paris conference permits to continue.

In sum, this is the situation: We had on the eastern frontiers of Russia and in the south of Europe almost a hundred million of people who were our natural allies, who were the best possible barrier against Bolshevism, who needed only our material support and assurance of our recognition of their ultimate demands for the future, not merely to check Bolshevism east of the Niemen and the Dniester, but to hrow it back upon Moscow itself.

Disintegration Allowed.

Substantially we have permitted these people to disintegrate and become themselves material for Bolshevism at home instead of erecting a barrier against this flame coming out of Russia. We actually assisted in transforming these margin states into inflamable material. We can no longer safely count upon the Poles, the Czecho-Slovaks, the Rumanians and the Ukranians as an adequate or even powerful obstacle to Bolshevik advance and we have to consider now the possibility that Bolshevism will in the next few weeks sweep into all of them and conceivably overwhelm all of them.

We know that there is coming a Bolshevik attack. We know that a great offensive is being prepared by Bolsheviks which may at any moment break upon Poland exactly as Ludendorff's gigantic offensive broke upon the British just a year ago. We know, too, that there is not in Poland, thanks to our own folly, any adequate power of resistance. We have thus sacrificed our first line of defense. We have not only sacrificed it, but we have risked the possibility of seeing our natural allies forced into the ranks of the enemy.

In this time, what of Germany? The notion that Germany could go over to Bolshevism was held by the whole world to be preposterous at the moment when Germany abandoned the war. On two separate occasions since then the elements of order in Germany have succeeded temporarily in restraining the elements of disorder which borrowed the colors and ideas of Bolshevism.

No Peace Treaty Yet.

But for four months we have been unable to make even a preliminary treaty of peace with Germany; we have continually held before the German people the extent of punishment we intended to inflict upon them. We have openly discussed, week after week, the indemnity we intended to take from them, the provinces we intended to deprive them of, the ships we meant to seize, and we have inculcated in the German mind the idea that we proposed to destroy the future of Germany, and in the meantime we have done nothing.

What has been the result? Had we imposed upon Germany in November substantially the terms which we mean to impose upon her in April or May or June, the German people would have known the worst, would have been compelled to accept and would already be on the way to adjust themselves to new conditions. The inherent sense of order and discipline in the German people would have reacted, as it has on two occasions already, against disorder, against Bolshevism. Instead, there has been no chance for the Germans themselves because Germany has been kept for four months in the position of a criminal awaiting what may be a death sentence. In such a situation it is inconceivable that any man would undertake to begin plans for a new life.

Germany Made Bolshevik Material.

The result is that we have transformed Germany by our course into new material of exactly the sort that Bolshevism feeds upon, precisely as we have deprived our natural allies along the eastern fringes of the elements of hope and confidence. We have performed a similar service to those elements of order in Germany upon whom we must depend if we are to have indemnity, upon whom we must depend if Germany is to be saved from Bolshevism. And Germany must be saved from Bolshevism, not primarily on her own account, but because if Bolshevism sweeping over Russia and Poland, enters Germany, passes through it and arrives at the Rhine, we shall have a situation which will tax the resources of the western powers to their utmost. We shall have to ask the war-weary people of France and of Britain, to make new war, more terrible than all preceding war because the Paris conference failed to act in time to prevent the storm from arriving at the frontier of western Europe. This is the situation today, four months after our military victory.

One year ago, Germany surprised the allied world by an offensive of a character which had not been foreseen and very nearly won the war. This was in March. In November, the Germans again surprised the allies by a surrender so totally unexpected that the allies had no common policy, had not prepared a policy to put into operation at the moment when Germany surrendered.

No Policy When Germans Yielded.

All our difficulties, and they have been enormous, have flowed from the fact that we had no policy when the Germans surrendered. It took Foch from April until July to organize a policy to meet the German attack, and such a policy could not have been organized had there been no unity of command. There has been no unity of command in the Paris conference, and as a consequence there has been no unity of policy as yet adopted to meet the new menace of Bolshevism, tenfold more serious than the German offensive strategy of last year.

It is a mistake to hold President Wilson responsible primarily for the delays and failures of the Paris conference. Had Europe possessed a clear and well defined policy when Mr. Wilson reached France, he would have been compelled to fashion his policy of peace in conformity with that. But when America came to Europe for the peace conference it found Europe with no policy, no unity of command, no comprehensive scheme for settling the world war. Mr. Lloyd-George was engaged in an election. France was utterly exhausted with the terrible strain of the struggle and only beginning the enormous task of opening her railroads and her highways through her devastated provinces and bringing food and fuel to millions of people suddenly freed from the German yoke. As for Italy she was engaged in solving to her own satisfaction the problem of the Adriatic, which alone concerned or interested her.

I do not think it is possible to exaggerate the extent of pessimism of apprehension today in Paris, not amongst members of the peace conference, whose minds are fixed upon drawing lines between Poles and Germans and Serbs and Rumanians, which would allocate fairly a certain number of villages whose names are unknown to the world, but amongst those people who know the east of Europe, who have seen the new storm arising, and who realize that we shall not impossibly find ourselves before the end of the next four months has come in a situation as perilous as that we faced at the moment when German troops overran Kemmel mountain and reached the last line of defense on the road to Calais.

PRICE RESTRICTIONS ON LOUISIANA SUGARS

New Orleans, March 24.—Restrictions on the prices of granulated and clarified sugars will continue in effect, the Louisiana sugar committee of the federal food administration decided at a special meeting here tonight.

It was brought out that because of the marked advance in freight rates on sugar, to become effective April 1, the sugar movement is far in excess of normal traffic. Millions of pounds are going to jobbing centers in Mississippi, Arkansas, Tennessee and Florida, it was shown. The increases, which affect points in the southeastern territory, are more than double the present scale in many instances.

The total membership of over 1,200 unions in England is ut at nearly 4,500,000.

RACIAL EQUALITY IN LEAGUE CHARTER

Washington, March 24.—Senator Phelan, of California, democrat, has cabled the American peace commissioners in Paris, protesting against any provision in the proposed constitution for the league of nations giving racial equality to Orientals. The California senator today sent a copy of his cablegram to Senator Borah, of Idaho, with a request that the latter support his protest.

"Any declaration," said Senator Phelan in his cablegram, "in constitution for race equality or just treatment may be construed to give jurisdiction to league over immigration, naturalization, elective franchise, land ownership and marriage, and should be avoided. An affirmative declaration that these are domestic questions should be made in consonance with established American policy."

Senator Phelan told the commissioners he believed western senators and others would "oppose any loophole by which Oriental peoples will possess equality with white race in the United States."

Senator Borah in replying to Senator Phelan said while in accord with this attitude, the proposed consttiution in its present form "unquestionably gives jurisdiction over immigration to the league."

PREP CONSTITUTION AND SCHEDULE ADOPTED

EDITED BY LOYD A. WILHOIT

Southern League Moguls Scrap Over a Schedule

Unable to Come to Decision Monday—No Opposition to Seven-Player and Salary Limit Rules. Vote to Play the Texas League Winner.

New Orleans, March 24.—After discussing in executive session for four hours the proposed 1919 playing schedule officials of the Southern association tonight decided to postpone until tomorrow the adoption of an official schedule. According to officials of the association, the presidents of the various clubs were unable to agree on a revision which would satisfy the demands of several representatives so far as Sunday games are concerned.

A. J. Heinemann, president of the New Orleans club, it was understood, led in a protest against the tentative plans for Sunday games in all cities regardless of the outcome of legislation pending in Tennessee, which he claimed would make revision necessary, no matter how it ended.

The seven-player rule adopted at the annual meeting last fall in Birmingham and the salary limit feature were unchanged as the result of today's meeting. Opposition failed to develop, and all present voted favorably on a motion to adopt the minutes of the Birmingham session. According to the constitution, it was explained, the spring meeting being primarily for adoption of a schedule, none of the rules approved at an annual meeting could be changed without a favorable vote of the entire body. Adoption of the minutes of the Birmingham meeting settled all matters outside of the schedule.

After Heinemann announced that the seven-player rule was before the national commission and that a decision was expected from that body before the 1919 season was started, President John D. Martin explained that a decision unfavorable to the rule would take precedence over the action of the officials at the Birmingham meeting.

A resolution was unanimously adopted favoring a post-season "series with the Texas league, should the latter receive an A classification."

Unofficial announcement was made that President Martin would announce Brennan, Carpenter, Pfenninger and Kerin as umpires in chief and that the association would provide whatever assistants they might need.

A "Baugh day" will be a feature of the Birmingham season, it was decided. The date will be announced later.

A motion proposed by Heinemann that the meeting today be open to newspaper men, lost on a 4-to-4 vote, Atlanta, Memphis, Mobile and Nashville representatives opposing an open session.

Contracts pertaining to ground and other privileges were let at the meeting.

Where Can I Find Relief From Itching, Terrifying Eczema?

This Question Is Ever on the Lips of the Afflicted.

Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas, and other terrifying conditions of the skin, are deep-seated blood diseases, and applications of salves, lotions and washes can only afford temporary relief, without reaching the real seat of the trouble. But just because local treatment has done you no good, there is no reason to despair. You simply have not sought the proper treatment, that is within your reach.

You have the experience of others who have suffered as you have to guide you to a prompt riddance of blood and skin diseases. No matter how terrifying the irritation, no matter how unbearable the itching and burning of the skin S. S. S. will promptly reach the seat of the trouble and forever rout from the blood every trace of the disease, just as it has for others who have suffered as you have. This grand blood remedy has been used for more than fifty years, and you have only to give it a fair trial to be restored to perfect health.

Our chief medical adviser is an authority on blood and skin disorders, and he will take pleasure in giving you such advice as your individual case may need, absolutely without cost. SHORTSTOPS STRONG ON HOLDOUT LIST

The holdout habit has been particularly noticeable this spring in the ranks of the shortstops. At present four of the principal holdouts are players who have been starring at the position between second and third base. Buck Weaver, of the White Sox; Charley Hollocher, of the Cubs; Owen Bush, of the Tigers, and Dave Bancroft, of the Phillies, are all on record as dissatisfied, and Billy Kopf, traded to the Cincinnati club, has announced his retirement from the game. Recently two other star shortstops, Roger Peckinpaugh and Everett Scott, returned their signed contracts after being on the holdout list for a protracted period.

HERMANN AND MOORE FIGHT "NO DECISION"

Memphis, Tenn., March 24.—Pete Hermann, of New Orleans, bantamweight champion, and Wilson "Pal" Moore, of Memphis, fought eight rounds in a "no-decision" bout here tonight with the consensus of opinion among sporting writers who witnessed the bout favoring Moore. Neither man scored a knockdown, and at no time was either in apparent danger of a knockout. Both weighed in under the 120-pound limit.

STRONG SWIMMING TEAM FOR GEORGIA TECH THIS YEAR

After spending much time in the arrangement of dates for swimming meets with eastern colleges, Georgia Tech has finally entered the water and will send one of the strongest teams in the country on trips this year. On March 20 the Tech team will meet the powerful swimming squad from Clemson college at Clemson.

Gilbert Fraser, captain of the team, is considered by all the best collegiate swimmer in this country. He holds countless records and contemplates winning others before his team returns from the tour of the east.

Besides such a swimmer as Fraser, such notables as Scott, Weiss, Evans, Owens and Carson, are also members of the Tech aggregation.

EMORY BASE UNIT AT NEWPORT NEWS

will be released from the service in a few days after reaching Camp Gordon.

Strickler Praises Unit.

Lieutenant Colonel Strickler beamed with appreciation when he had reached his quarters in the debarkation camp and declared he had seen nothing so palatial since he left America almost a year ago.

"Conditions were not as bad in France as we expected them, though," he said, "We are more than pleased with our reception here. This camp is splendid and we want for nothing we could desire except to be moved away and get back into the old life again.

"I am very happy to say that we are taking back the unit in the best of shape. The health of the organization was unusually good and none of the memberse of my unit were killed, although they performed many perilous tasks. They were never in the battle lines, but several of the hospital men were rather seriously wounded on the outskirts.

Need for Nurses Great.

"The need for nurses in France was so apparent many of the nurses in this unit volunteered to remain. It was a very fine thing to do, I think, because their life isn't all pleasure over there. I wish to speak in the highest terms of their fidelity to duty and the unflinching heroism with which they performed their duty.

"They don't know when they will get back to this country. No one knows yet. There is still a lot of work to be done. The splendid work done by the officers and men of this unit cannot be praised too highly.

"We are all very anxious to get back to Atlanta. The men will soon be discharged, I believe, and the officers will be released, too. All are anxious to take up their civilian duties again. We expect to leave the latter part of this week for Camp Gordon."

Plans Nearly Complete.

Plans for the splendid welcome Georgia and Atlanta will accord the Seventeenth Engineers, "Atlanta's Own," and the Emory unit have been practically completed by the committees arranging for the reception of the homecoming soldiers, and final details await only definite announcement of the date when they will reach Georgia soil again.

Present plans contemplate that upon reaching the city the troops will go directly to Camp Gordon. The next day, probably about noon, they will be brought in motor trucks to Atlanta and will form about 1 o'clock at the corner of Baker and Peachtree streets for a parade through the heart of the city. A half holiday will be proclaimed by Mayor James L. Key, and the city will be dressed in gala attire. Thousands of flags will be flung to the breeze along the line of march.

The school children are training to play a conspicuous part in the welcome. They will be massed along the route and will sing appropriate songs as the soldiers pass, the refrain being passed on by them to others accompanying the soldiers as they go.

This part of the program will be augmented by fifty singing groups from department stores, factories and other establishments.

Five thousand "Welcome Home" window posters have been ordered by the War Mothers' organization and these will display their legend in as many windows in view of the passing troops.

Governor and Staff.

In the first division of the parade, headed by the 45th band from Camp Gordon, will be Governor Dorsey and his staff, Mayor Key and his staff, and other state and civic officials. Then will follow high school and cadet organizations preceding the engineers and the Emory unit.

According to present plans, the route to be followed by the parade will be down Peachtree and Whitehall streets to Mitchell, and down Mitchell to the Auditorium, where luncheon served by several hundred pretty high school girls as waitresses will await the troops.

Addresses of welcome will be delivered by Governor Dorsey and Mayor Key.

F. J. Paxon, chairman of the decoration committee, will call a meeting of his committee for 10:45 o'clock this morning in the mayor's office.

Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock a meeting will be held of the members of the general committee appointed by General Chairman James L. Key to arrange for the welcome celebration for the 17th engineers upon their arrival in Atlanta. The session will be held in the office of Mayor Kee.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the finance committee, upon which falls the responsibility for raising funds for the big welcome, will meet. This meeting will be in the assembly room of the chamber of commerce.

The city business sections will be aflame with the emblematic bunting of Uncle Sam and the "Stars and Stripes" will float from every building in profusion. People are requested to decorate their homes and to leave nothing undone that will contribute to the spirit of Atlanta's big welcome to her own organization.

PLAN TO SAFEGUARD MONROE DOCTRINE

New York, March 24.—A proposal to safeguard the Monroe doctrine in the league of nations by inserting in the league covenant a clause recognizing the International Union of American Republics has been made to the American delegation at the peace conference, John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union, announced here today. He declared that the American nations' organization, credited with preventing "several and possibly many American wars," might well bear to the league a relation similar to that of a state legislature to congress, and be entrusted to "care completely" for American questions.

Games Begin April 4; League on Firm Basis

Ten Playing Dates, Eight Games for Each Team Arranged — Adoption of Constitution Means No More Squabbling.

By W. C. Munday, Jr.

Probably the most important meeting in the history of the boys' prep league was held last night at Fulton High, at which time the 1919 baseball schedule was announced and a constitution adopted.

The schedule of games announced shows ten playing dates totalling 20 games for the season.

Each school plays eight games, meeting each other school in the league twice. The schedule in detail appears elsewhere on this page.

The first issue to come before the meeting was the question as to the kind of official league ball to be used this season. C. P. Watson, a representative of the W. H. Perrin Sporting Goods concern, offered to the league two balls, one made by the Goldsmith people and the other by the Victor company.

After a brief discussion, it was agreed to adopt the Victor as the official league ball. The Victor will be offered by Watson, it was stated, at $14.50 per dozen, or $2 each retail. President Bean, who presided over the meeting, had a resolution adopted to buy the baseballs from the W. H. Perrin company only.

Meets With Approval.

President Bean then instructed the secretary to read the constitution, which was before the house for adoption. The constitution was read, and occasionally some parts were ruled out and new ones inserted. As a whole, however, the constitution met with approval.

After the ratification of the constitution, the big prep swimming meet, which will be held on next Friday night at the "Y," was discussed. Boys' High, Tech High, and G. M. A. are certain to put teams in the water, and President Bean announced that Marist would probably be represented.

As two teams, Peacock and Commercial, had dropped from the league baseball this year, it was unanimously decided to rearrange a schedule. It had been thought by some that the 1919 basketball schedule would be used for baseball, but owing to the withdrawal of the two institutions this was made impossible.

Representatives of Schools.

The representatives of the school were President Bean, Marist; Lieutenant Clayton, G. M. A.; Professor Rosser, Boys' High school; Professor Hopkins, Fulton High, and Professor Nicholson, Tech High school.

Interesting extracts from the league constitution adopted Monday night are as follows:

Name of League.

The name of the league shall be "The Atlanta League of Prep Schools."

Officers.

The officers shall be a president and a secretary-treasurer. These officers shall be elected at the annual meeting on the second Monday night in October of each year, and shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. The outgoing president shall be chosen as secretary-treasurer.

Membership.

The membership shall be composed of a representative from each of the following schools: Boys' High school, Tech High school, Fulton High school, Commercial High school, Marist college, Peacock school, Georgia Military academy and such other schools as may receive the unanimous consent of the above charter members.

The representative from each school shall be chosen in the manner prescribed by the principal or president of that school; provided that no student shall be allowed to represent his school or to speak in a league meeting.

League Activities.

The league shall have supervision over all the athletic activities of its members, making schedules for all games except out-of-town games.

These athletic activities shall include football, basketball, baseball, swimming, track and tennis.

Eligibility of Players.

No person shall be eligible to take part in any game, tournament, meet, or contest under the supervision of the league unless he be a bona fide student in the institution which he represents.

No person shall be eligible to take part in any game, tournament, meet or contest who has received, who receives or who expects to receive for that participation any remuneration whatsoever.

No person shall be eligible to take part in any football game under the supervision of the league unless he shall be a bona fide student and a regular attendant on the classes in the school he represents, not later than the first day in October.

No person shall be eligible to take part in any league activities other than football, except he be a bona fide student and a regular attendant on the classes in the school he represents, not later than the first week of school after the Christmas holidays.

Athletic Seasons.

The football season shall close the Saturday after Thanksgiving of each year. No official games shall be played after that date.

The basketball season shall consist of the period between the date of the opening and closing game of the official league schedule. No official game shall be played after the closing date. The president of the league shall be empowered to fix the date for the playing off of any postponed or tied game.

The basketball season shall consist of the period between the date of the opening game and the date of the closing game of the official league schedule. No official game shall be played after the closing date. The president shall be empowered to fix the date for the playing of any unplayed, postponed or tied game, none of which shall be played after the closing date of the season.

Officials of Games.

All officials of games shall be appointed by the president. All these shall be the official representatives of the league in the said games and contests.

All games, meets, contests and tournaments shall be conducted under the Spalding rules for such games, meets, contests or tournaments.

Football officials shall receive a fee of $5 each for each game, to be paid out of the treasury of the league.

Basketball officials shall receive a fee of $2 each for each game, to be paid out of the treasury of the league.

Baseball officials shall receive a fee of $2 each for each game to be played out of league schedule.

NO FOREIGN WRESTLERS OF CHAMPION TIMBER

American promoters of wrestling are now scouring Europe in search of formidable grapplers to bring to this country to oppose the leading mat artists here, but up to the present no word has been received of the discovery of any potential champions. The war brought to an end the careers—and in many cases the lives—of some of the great European wrestlers, including Alex Aberg and George Lurich, and those interested in the game in this country feel that the ranks of foreign contenders for the world's title must be reinforced in order to arouse any widespread attention on the part of the fans.

Commodore Feds Tenderly Inter All Ball Victims

Effigies of Gordon Teams and Tech High School Squad Laid to Rest at Prison.

If the western millionaire, who was once an inmate of the federal prison and who provided the magnificent ball ground and equipment for the men there, could have been present at the exercises conducted just after the victorious game with the Tech High boys last Saturday evening, he would know beyond a doubt that his efforts to serve his fellow prisoners are not in vain.

The exercises consisted of funeral ceremonies and interment in the new "baseball grave yard" of the visiting team, the members of whom were present and made up the chief mourners. With jubilant hearts but grave faces, the inmates conducted the services with all the solemnity of a real funeral and majestically lowered into the ground a little black coffin that contained an effigy of Tech High.

Two other victims followed Tech High into the land of the conquered. These victims were the first and and second teams of Camp Gordon's Tenth battalion. Beautiful headstones bearing the names of the deceased stand at the head of the graves, and a large sign on the untenanted plots generously declare that "free plots" will be offered to any team. Another sign reading "Always room for one more," supplants the generosity shown by the other motto. Vases with exquisite bouquets of flowers bedeck the graves of the fallen fighters. Any team destined to fall by the hands of the inmates of the prison may be comforted by the fact that their graves will be ornamented.

The conquerors demand, however, that each victim attend its own funeral exercises.

Alleged Ala. Murderer Captured After 5 Years; Had Served in the Army

Huntsville, Ala., March 24.—(Special.)—Huntsville authorities have captured Wiley Barden, wanted in Marshall county, Alabama, on a charge of murder, after he has been at large five years, and after he had served eighteen months as a soldier in the United States army. Barden escaped jail in Guntersville five years ago. He was taken back to Guntersville today.

$900,000 BASEBALL DAMAGE-SUIT BEGINS

Washington, March 24.—Trial of the $900,000 treble damage suit, under the Sherman anti-trust law of the Baltimore Federal baseball league club against National and American league clubs and former Federal league officials, was ordered today to begin tomorrow before Associate Justice Stafford, of the District of Columbia federal supreme court.

Chairman Herrmann, of the National commission; Ban Johnson, president of the American league, and other baseball magnates were in court today expecting the trial to begin, but Justice Stafford was engaged and it went over until tomorrow.

The litigation is similar to that in the federal district court at Philadelphia two years ago, which was halted in the midst of trial. The Baltimore club claims an actual loss of $300,000 from the disruption of the Federal league, and asks the three-fold penalty of the Sherman law. Whether baseball is "commerce" within the scope of the Sherman law is one of the principal questions said to be involved.
